POELKER TARGET OF DEARMONT IN TESTIMONY ON POLICE FUND BILL

'We Know How He Acts,' Board Member Says in Opposing 'Floor' for Budget—Priest a Witness.

By EDWARD H. THORNTON
A Staff Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch.

JEFFERSON CITY, March 17—Russell L. Dearmont, member of the St. Louis Police Board, assailed Comptroller John H. Poelker of St. Louis last night in a House committee hearing on a bill to give city authorities control over the police department's budget.

Poelker had appeared before the committee in favor of an amendment to the bill which would set 20 per cent of the city's anticipated revenue as a "floor" for the police budget.

An appropriation in excess of that amount would be subject to approval of the Estimate Board.

Dearmont, president of the Missouri Pacific railroad, said: "I believe Mr. Poelker was less than frank when he said the 20 per cent would be a 'floor' for the police department's budget."

"Actually, we wouldn't be able to get more than that without going to him, and we've had experience with Mr. Poelker and know how he acts."

"The real reason they want to cut the police appropriation is to put more money under the control of Mr. Poelker."

Record speaks for itself. Poelker, who serves on the Estimate Board with the Mayor and President of the Board of Aldermen, later told the committee in reference to Dearmont's statement:

"Some of the remarks made about me personally I'll not even honor by recognition. My record since I've been with the city speaks for itself."

The amendment Poelker favored was recommended by Donald Gunn, president of the St. Louis Board of Aldermen, as a compromise in the current fiscal controversy between city authorities and the Police Board.

The city knocked out $640,000 of the $14,232,352 budget for the fiscal year which ends March 31. The Board has asked the Missouri Supreme Court to force the city to appropriate the $640,000.

The bill considered at yesterday's hearing by the House Committee on Governmental Organizations would remove from present state law a provision allegedly requiring city authorities to appropriate whatever amount is requested by the Police Board for operating the department.

No Action Taken.

No action was taken on the bill, which is sponsored by Representative Thomas A. Walsh (Dem.), St. Louis.

Dearmont and the three other members of the St. Louis Police Board voiced strong opposition to the bill.

H. Sam Priest, board president, gave the board's position in a 14-page statement he read to the committee.

"We are opposed to this bill because we believe it would subject the St. Louis Police Department to local pressures," Priest testified. "Control of its budget is the key to control of any police department."

"When local officials and pressure groups, including gambling and criminal interests, control a police department's budget, they almost automatically gain control of appointments, promotions, and of what laws shall be enforced."

District Transit Rule Unwise, P.S. Co. Tells Freeholders

Company's Counsel at Hearing on Metropolitan Agency Plan Urges No Tampering With State Control

It would be unwise to take regulation of mass transportation here away from the Missouri Public Service Commission and place it in the hands of a district governmental agency, Gaylord C. Burke, counsel for the St. Louis Public Service Co., asserted yesterday.

He spoke at a public hearing on a proposal for establishment of a metropolitan district authority to handle certain services common to St. Louis and St. Louis County. The Metropolitan Board of Freeholders is considering this plan and an alternate proposal for merger of the city and the county.

Noting that the district plan would empower the metropolitan agency to regulate or even operate mass transit, Burke raised critical questions about this provision. He termed his questions "rhetorical" and said the Public Service Co. is taking no stand on the plan, but nonetheless made it clear that the utility would prefer no tampering with the present regulatory setup.

"We have a body of statutory law regulating all public utilities," Burke declared. "I doubt whether the State Constitution intends to repeal the public utility law enacted by the Legislature. I seriously question whether the framers of the Constitution contemplated regulation of mass transit as one of the common services to be provided by a metropolitan district. I think what they had in mind was governmental services."

A different opinion had been given the freeholders by Robert P. Elam, special counsel. He advised that a metropolitan authority would have power to regulate a private utility, and the Metropolitan St. Louis Survey had recommended that this be one of the services taken over.

"Why is mass transit singled out for regulation by the proposed district agency, and not gas, electric and water service?" Burke asked the freeholders.

FLASHING LIGHTS WILL BE USED AT 17 INTERSECTIONS

Flashing red and amber lights will replace automatic signals tomorrow at 15 intersections on three St. Louis arterial highways, Acting Traffic Commissioner Ellis Henry announced today.

Lights will flash amber, signifying caution, on the main thoroughfares and red at the side streets, calling for a full stop. At two other intersections all lights will flash red, indicating a four-way stop. The arrangement is on an experimental basis and, if successful, will be extended to other crossings, Henry said.

Gravois avenue at Ohio avenue, Utah street, Taft avenue, Bates street and Holly Hills boulevard; Chippewa street at Brannon and Mackland avenues.

30-DAY OUTLOOK FOR WEATHER ACROSS NATION

WASHINGTON, March 17 (AP)—The Weather Bureau said yesterday its 30-day outlook for mid-March to mid-April calls for temperatures to average below seasonal normals from the Great Lakes eastward to New England and along the Gulf and South Atlantic coasts.

The bureau added:

"Above normal averages are expected over most areas west of the continental divide, and also over the Central and Northern Plains. In unspecified areas, near normal temperatures are anticipated."

"Precipitation is predicted to exceed normal from the Midwest northeastward through New England, as well as in Gulf and South Atlantic states. Sub-normal amounts are indicated for the central and southern California, and the Central Plains. Elsewhere, near normal amounts are in prospect."

They Claim Record in Latest Silliness Season Competition.

LONDON, March 17 (AP)—Eighteen London University students claimed a world record for togetherness today. All of them squeezed into a telephone booth at the same time.

The competitors in British schoolboy's latest silly-season pastime squeezed into the booth in three layers of six. The previous record was 17, set by students of North Staffordshire University at Keele two weeks ago.

A British phone booth is 3 feet square and 8 feet 4 inches tall.

Vanguard I Observes Birthday By Making Its 3921st Orbit

WASHINGTON, March 17 (AP)—The Vanguard I satellite, a year old today, has proved that the density of the thin air 400 miles above the earth fluctuates with the seasons. Disturbances on the sun also may cause variations, but it may take more than 10 years to find out how extensive and how recurrent both kinds of changes are.

This was reported at a Vanguard anniversary dinner last night by Dr. John P. Hagen, director of Project Vanguard.

Hagen said the air density 400 miles up had been measured by Vanguard I through observation of the "drag" or friction on the satellite.

"It has been seen that the densities even at these great heights are not constant," Hagen said. "They are at least seasonal, and may well be a function of the intensity of solar activity."

"Before this question can be clarified, we must observe the orbit through the whole of the 11-year sun spot cycle."

At 7:15 a.m. today, exactly one year from the time of its launching at Cape Canaveral, Fla., the 3.4 pound, 6 1/4 inch Vanguard I sphere had completed 3921 orbits around the earth—one every 2 hours and 14 minutes—and had traveled 131,318,211 miles.

Its sun-powered batteries were still broadcasting a steady signal.

The conventional batteries powering the tracking transmitter of Vanguard II failed Sunday. They had lasted 27 days, a full week longer than had been expected.

DON'T KNUCKLE UNDER TO RUSSIA IN BERLIN CRISIS, BURKE WARNS

If That Happened, Reds Could Find Other Excuses to Fight, He Says—Calls U.S. Superior.

WASHINGTON, March 17 (AP)—The United States would gain nothing by "knuckling under" in Berlin because the Russians could find other excuses to start a war, Adm. Arleigh Burke, chief of naval operations, told the Senate Preparedness subcommittee in secret testimony last Friday.

A censored version was made public last night.

If Soviet Premier Nikita Khrushchev carried out his threat to turn over to the East Germans control of the free world's access to Berlin, Burke said, the United States has two choices.

"Either we accept it and knuckle under or we don't," he said. "And if we knuckle under, the succeeding steps, the succeeding pressures in other areas are going to come faster and faster and faster."

"If Russia wants to make a point of it, if they want to start a war over this point, they will start a war. . . . But if they want to start a war whether it is over this point or some other point."

"They can make the point any time that they want to make it."

U.S. Has the Might.

If Russia chooses war, Burke said the United States has the military might to destroy the Soviets and will continue to have it for several years.

"Our strength now at the moment is much greater than Russia's," Burke said. "A year from now it will still be greater than Russia's."

"What we have to have is the capability to destroy Russia in a matter of hours, in a general war, and in the future we have got to put our missiles in locations which are unknown to the enemy. Intelligence is going to play a tremendous part, have a tremendous effect on this whole problem."

Both Burke and Gen. Randolph M. Pate, Marine Corps commandant, told the subcommittee they think there is more danger of a limited war than of a general war.

Burke said he regards a limited war as more probable.

His thought was that the United States would be destroyed, and would have nothing to gain."

With this in mind, Burke said he regards reductions in the size of the Navy and Marine Corps as unwise, but does not believe they now jeopardize national security.

The 10-man bipartisan committee, headed by William H. Draper Jr., also urged that loans for economic development of the less developed nations be stepped up to at least one billion dollars a year by July 1960.

The committee, in a preliminary report to the President, said it had reached the unanimous conclusion that the foreign aid program should be put on a long-range continuing basis.

Can't Afford Risks.

"We believe the program essential to our own security and that of the free world and are convinced that we can afford what is necessary," the committee declared. "What we cannot afford are the costs and risks involved in abandoning or emasculating the Mutual Security Program."

The committee said the United States must make a choice soon on the need for a continuous foreign aid program.

"The constant use of foreign aid as a whipping boy," it said, "may be gradually choking this vital feature of our national security policy to death."

In another development on foreign aid, Representative Wayne L. Hays (Dem.), Ohio, threatened today to tell the world just how much foreign aid the United States is giving each country, long a closely guarded secret. He said he would reveal country by country what it is proposed to give "these dictators and others."

His threat was made in a row with Chairman Thomas E. Morgan (Dem.), Pennsylvania, of the House Foreign Affairs Committee over closing the doors on committee questioning of

AIR LINE ROUTES OVER SOUTH POLE BY '69 PREDICTED

ALAMEDA, Calif., March 17 (AP)—Commercial airlines will be flying Antarctic routes within 10 years, at tremendous savings in time and distance, just as they fly across the North Pole today.

This prediction was made yesterday by the Navy's foremost antarctic expert, Rear Adm. George Dufek, returning from his fourth expedition to the South Polar regions.

It will be made possible by building an air base at Cape Bernacchi, 50 miles from the United States, main base at McMurdo Sound.

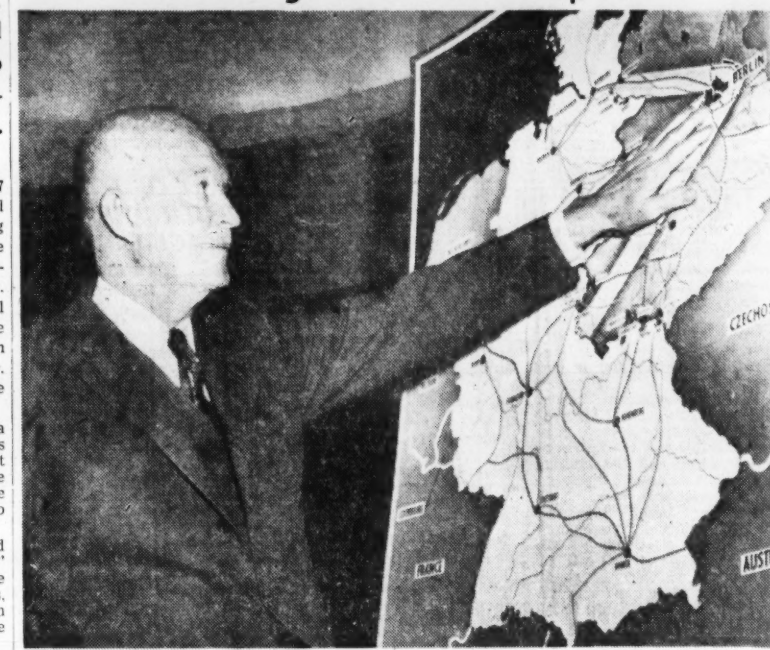

"It can be done and it will be costly—somewhere between $50,000,000 and $200,000,000—but I predict it will be built within 10 years," the Admiral said.

"Air travelers between Sydney and Buenos Aires, will have to fly only about 6000 miles via the Antarctic."

"Today, having to go the long way around by Honolulu and San Francisco, they have to travel close to 12,000 miles."

$400,000,000 HIKE IN MILITARY AID IS PROPOSED

High-Level Advisory Committee Says It Would Permit More NATO Weapons.

WASHINGTON, March 17 (AP)—President Eisenhower's special advisers on foreign aid urged today an additional $400,000,000 in military assistance primarily to arm NATO countries with missiles and jet aircraft.

The extra allowance would be outside of spending so far proposed by the Administration, but the White House said it would not affect next year's foreign aid budget of $3,929,995,000 including $1,600,000,000 for arms. The actual outlays would come later as deliveries are made.

The 10-man bipartisan committee, headed by William H. Draper Jr., also urged that loans for economic development of the less developed nations be stepped up to at least one billion dollars a year by July 1960.

Actor Jean Mayer appeared embarrassed both for the naughty French lines and the fact that the girl he wooed in the play was English and named Maggy. Denise Noel, who played Maggy, said the

IRISH PRESIDENT MET AT AIRPORT BY EISENHOWER

WASHINGTON, March 17 (AP)—President Sean T. O'Kelly of Ireland was welcomed to Washington today by President Eisenhower. Both said it was "a happy augury" that it happened on St. Patrick's day.

A green carpet was rolled out at Washington's National Airport for this first visit here by a president of Ireland. An honor guard of representatives of all the armed services provided a backdrop. The flags of the United States and Ireland flew side by side.

The Irish leader flew from New York City aboard Mr. Eisenhower's plane, Columbine III. After being greeted by Mr. Eisenhower, O'Kelly said:

"On this day the Irish honor the Apostle of the Gael. . . . Nowhere, I venture to say, is this feast celebrated with greater enthusiasm than here in the United States."

More than 300 spectators were on hand. A United States Navy band played the Irish national anthem, "The Soldier's Song," followed by "The Star-Spangled Banner."

DULLES'S WEIGHT DOWN 8 POUNDS IN STAY AT HOSPITAL

WASHINGTON, March 17 (AP)—Secretary of State John Foster Dulles has lost about eight pounds in his stay at Walter Reed Hospital, the State Department reported today.

Some who have seen Dulles in the last few days got the impression that he had fallen substantially below his normal weight of 185 pounds. He entered the hospital Feb. 10, underwent a hernia operation Feb. 13 and began radiation treatments for cancer Feb. 20.

Department press officer Lincoln White, who gave out the information on Dulles's weight, said the Secretary had another X-ray treatment this morning. The treatments are expected to end this week and he will then begin a rest period. He may go out of town for two weeks or so. After that he is expected to decide whether he can resume his duties as Secretary of State.

Dulles got a report on international affairs in mid-morning from his secretary Joseph N. Greene.

Regarding the President's assessment of United States military preparedness, Mansfield said there "is room for honest differences of opinion."

Senate Republican Leader Everett M. Dirksen of Illinois praised Mr. Eisenhower for expressing readiness to "negotiate with the Russians on reasonable terms."

Remarks that the President previously has said he did not think much good would come from a summit meeting, Dirksen said Mr. Eisenhower's revised position evidently was based on "new developments" in the diplomatic exchanges with Soviet Premier Khrushchev.

House Republican whip Leslie C. Arends of Illinois said:

HE SAYS FIRM POLICY IN BERLIN CRISIS IS BEST HOPE FOR PEACE

Replies to Defense Critics in TV Address to Nation—Sees Hope in Change in Soviet Tone.

By RAYMOND P. BRANDT
Chief Washington Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch.

WASHINGTON, March 17—President Eisenhower said last night he would be willing to participate in a summit conference with Soviet Russia this summer if an early foreign ministers' meeting justified this further effort to resolve the Berlin crisis.

In a nationally televised half-hour report to the nation, devoted to the German situation, national defense and the mutual security program, the President set this framework for negotiations with Soviet Premier Khrushchev:

"We will not retreat one inch from our duty. We will continue to exercise our right of peaceful passage to and from Berlin. We will not be the first to back down. It is the Soviets who threaten the use of force to interfere with such free passage. We are ready to participate fully in every sincere effort at negotiation that will respect the existing rights of all and their opportunity to live in peace."

He noted that the Soviet note of March 2 appeared to be a change from Khrushchev's ultimatum, asserting that unless the Western allies agreed to evacuate Western Berlin by May 27 Soviet Russia would turn over its part of responsibility for Berlin to the East Germans.

"We would never negotiate under a stated time limit or agenda or on other unreasonable terms," Mr. Eisenhower said. "We are, with our allies, however, in view of the changed tone of the Soviet note, concerting a reply to that note."

"It is my hope that thereby all of us can reach agreement with the Soviets on an early meeting at the level of foreign ministers."

"Assuming developments that justify a summer meeting at the summit, the United States would be ready to participate in this further effort."

Door Open for Wide Talks.

Although the foreign portions of the speech related mostly to Berlin, the President left the door open for conferences on the wider subject of Europe, saying:

"We are ready to consider all proposals which may help to reassure and will take into account the European peoples affected. We are willing to listen to new ideas and are prepared to present others. We will do everything within our power to bring about serious negotiations and to make these negotiations meaningful."

He did not elaborate on the "new ideas" the Western powers expect from the Soviet Union and its satellites or hint what new proposals this government would make.

At the same time, the President emphasized that if negotiations fail, this country is prepared to fight rather than yield to Russian demands that the Allies withdraw their troops from West Berlin.

"We cannot," he said, "try to purchase peace by forsaking 2,000,000 free people of Berlin."

Firmness Called 'Best Hope.'

He also said: "The risk of war is minimized if we stand firm. War would become more likely if we gave way and encouraged a rule of terrorism rather than a rule of law and order. Indeed, this is the peace policy which we are striving to carry out throughout the world. In that policy is found the world's best hope for peace."

The timing of the address, one of the most specific made by President Eisenhower, was determined by his conference with British Prime Minister Macmillan beginning Friday at the seclusion of Camp David in nearby Maryland.

Mr. Eisenhower used the occasion also to deny charges that his recommendations for defense expenditures during the coming fiscal year had been subordinated to a balance budget and to urge congressional approval of his $3,929,995,000 request for foreign military and economic aid.

Obviously replying to Senate Majority Leader Lyndon B. Johnson of Texas, Democratic Senator Stuart Symington of

STRAUSS GIVES SENATORS HIS VIEWS ON TRADE WAR WITH RUSSIA

Hearings Open on His Confirmation as Commerce Secretary — He Defends Copper Decision.

By RICHARD DUDMAN
A Washington Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch,
WASHINGTON, March 17 — Lewis L. Strauss appeared before a Senate committee today in what promised to be a lengthy public hearing on his confirmation as Secretary of Commerce.

Chairman Warren Magnuson (Dem., Wash.), of the Interstate and Foreign Commerce Committee, indicated the inquiry might not be completed before the Easter recess at the end of this month.

In the friendly atmosphere of the opening session, Strauss portrayed himself as a key figure in this country's economic race with the Soviet Union.

"I believe that the economic warfare which the Soviet Government has declared upon the United States can be most effectively countered in the work and decisions of the Department of Commerce," he said in a statement.

"I have certain strongly held views as to the gravity of the Communist economic offensive at the present time."

He said that trade to the Russians "is simply a servant of their foreign and military policy."

Strauss accepted responsibility for the decision last month to put copper back on a restricted list, so that a special license must be obtained for export of copper to the Soviet bloc. Copper had been removed from the list last summer, he said.

The Secretary said he had determined that copper was a strategic material and should be on the restricted list.

Steel Pipe Ruling Criticized. Strauss drew some unofficial criticism from State Department officials last week by refusing to permit a shipment of steel pipe to Russia. Referring to such decisions, he said Premier Khrushchev had mentioned him and the policy in a speech last week.

"This would indicate, it seems to me, that our procedure is the correct one, because he doesn't approve of it," Strauss said. "At least, that is one test."

Strauss asked that the copper restriction be discussed first in executive session.

He suggested that recent low-priced Russian exports of aluminum were solely to hurt the United States, Britain and consumers, since Russia itself expects a domestic aluminum shortage through 1965. He said buyers had found they could not continue purchasing Russian aluminum and would not be attracted again by the same tactics. But buyers of other commodities could be victimized by the same practices, he said.

Asked what good would be done by the United States fair to open July 4 in Moscow, Strauss said it was intended to show several million Russians the high standard of living enjoyed by American workmen and possibly undo some of the effects of 40 years of propaganda.

Senator John O. Pastore (Dem., Rhode Island), denied the fair would have any such effect and called it "a lovely way to waste American money." He suggested that Strauss probably agreed with that view privately.

Strauss merely smiled.

Would Not Resign. Pastore also noted that several Cabinet members had announced their intention to do so. He said he considered it against the national interest to have a new man take over a Cabinet post "cold," as Strauss had put it. Pastore asked how long Strauss would serve.

"If confirmed, I would serve until Jan. 20, 1961, unless my resignation is requested," Strauss replied.

In the discussion of East-West trade, Magnuson observed that the committee had established a subcommittee on the subject. Strauss said the move would be "of greatest assistance" to the Department of Commerce.

"I'm hoping it will work both ways," Magnuson said.

Berlin Stand

The President's talk was "very fine, factual, forceful and informative."

Speaker Sam Rayburn (Dem., Texas), said: "I listened intently to the President's speech. I trust that his judgment of the situation is correct."

House Republican Leader Charles A. Halleck of Indiana: "The President's speech demonstrates his full realization of the situation and the kind of leadership we need."

Brushfire Wars.

Senator John Sparkman (Dem., Alabama), a member of the foreign relations committee, said: "The speech left me wondering whether we would really be able to handle brushfire wars if they should break out in more than one area of the world (but) I agree with him on Berlin."

Representative Melvin Price (Dem., Illinois), a member of the House Armed Services Committee, observed: "The President left the impression that we have I.C.B.M.'s running out of our ears when actually we don't have any operational yet."

Representative A. S. J. Canahan (Dem., Missouri), second ranking member of the House Foreign Affairs Committee, declared: "I have no objection to a summit meeting but there probably isn't much we can compromise on."

Senator Kenneth B. Keating (Rep., New York), said: "The President has laid it on the line in a clear fashion which I hope will do two things: One, make the aggressors understand we mean business, and two, silence some of the detractors and would-be appeasers at home."

Senator Richard Neuberger (Dem., Oregon), thought the President had made a "very fair and comprehensive report to the American people" on the Berlin situation. "My only hope," Neuberger said, "is that the President was not more optimistic and reassured than the facts justify. I wish he had discussed more urgently the sacrifices the free world is going to have to make to sustain our position in Berlin."

Strength Questioned.

Senator Albert Gore (Dem., Tennessee): "The President gave an admirable statement of our rights and responsibilities with respect to the people of Berlin. I simply do not understand upon what basis the President made some of his flat-footed statements about our strength. Perhaps the President has some information which I have not seen or heard in numerous closed door committee sessions."

Senator Robert S. Kerr (Dem., Oklahoma), said he is 100 per cent for the President's firm stand on the Berlin situation. "We have got to honor our commitments in Berlin," Kerr said. "If we don't stand on our commitments there, the only thing left to do would be to run. If Russia ever got us on the run, then the free world would be done for. I am for the use of force if necessary, to carry out our commitments in Berlin."

Under Secretary of State C. Douglas Dillon, who was testifying in support of the administration's program.

Dillon Reads Statement.

After Dillon read a prepared statement, Morgan announced the committee would go into executive session to question him and examine the country-by-country aid proposals.

Both Hays and Representative John L. Picher (Dem., Georgia), protested. The Ohioan said unless he could question Dillon in public he would release the breakdown.

Nevertheless Morgan ordered the hearing room cleared. Emerging half an hour later, Hays said under questioning by reporters that the secrecy was the Administration's idea. Morgan denied it, saying it was his own.

Morgan added that if Hays undertakes to give the country-by-country figures in the House he will try to stop the disclosure on a point of order. He said the rules prohibit release of classified information.

During private session, Hays said, Dillon was asked "the same leading questions that the Administration sent up here to ask, for which they have the answers written out."

Herter Criticized.

(The United Press International quoted Hays as saying that Acting Secretary Christian A. Herter, yesterday's opening witness, "looked so bad — they had to get him in out of the rain.")

The committee, Hays said, has been going over how much aid will be given Cuba, Haiti and the Dominican Republic.

"They seem to want to make sure if there is war between those three nations, we are going to be on both sides," Hays said. He did not specifically identify "they."

In his prepared testimony Dillon said that there will be a drop-off in delivery even if Congress votes the full $1,600,000,000 for arms asked in the 1960 budget. Pipeline funds next July, he said, will be down to $2,600,000,000 from the 1953 high of $8,500,000,000.

The same point had been stressed by Draper's study committee.

In a letter to Mr. Eisenhower the 10-man group said that as a result of substantial United States contributions "we do not now stand alone."

Members of the committee include two former directors of the budget, Republican Joseph M. Dodge and Democrat James E. Webb.

Other members are Adm. Arthur W. Radford, former chairman of the Joint Chiefs of Staff; Gen. Alfred M. Dice-Rolling Judge Draws Fire.

MIAMI, Fla., March 17 (AP) — A municipal judge who rolled dice to set a jail term has come under fire from the Spanish-American Bar Association. The group adopted a resolution yesterday asking Mayor Robert K. High to fire Judge Mitchell Goldman because he rolled dice before sentencing a man on a gambling charge.

HEART OF LONDON SUBURB HEAVILY DAMAGED BY FIRE

LONDON, March 17 (AP)—

London's biggest peacetime fire in half a century was brought under control at midnight after burning out the heart of the suburb of Ilford. Damage was estimated in the millions of dollars but nobody was reported hurt.

The fire is believed to have started in the polishing shop of a furniture store. It destroyed two department stores, six other shops and nine homes. It damaged 24 other buildings.

More than 200 firemen and 50 pieces of apparatus were called from a radius of 70 miles. About 65 families were evacuated from their homes off the main street.

One burning building collapsed on a railroad track, blocking traffic for hours. Street lights were extinguished and busses and cars had to be detoured around the town.

MANSFIELD'S 56TH BIRTHDAY

Senator Lyndon B. Johnson of Texas, the Democratic leader, called Mansfield, assistant leader, a "tower of strength."

Senator Everett M. Dirksen of Illinois, the Republican minority leader, said Mansfield has "a heart filled with love for his fellow human beings."

SOVIETS SAY U.S. WANTS TO KEEP BERLIN OCCUPIED

Move to Prolong Stay Noted in Eisenhower Speech — Western Allies Back Him.

LONDON, March 17 (AP)—The Soviet news agency Tass tonight called President Eisenhower's speech on the Berlin crisis an attempt to prolong the occupation of West Berlin indefinitely.

Mr. Eisenhower's declaration that he is willing to attend a summit conference if it shows promise of achieving results was welcomed in western Europe, particularly in Britain. West Germany applauded his firm stand on Berlin.

The European press gave the speech top play. But Tass charged that Mr. Eisenhower's main intent was "to convince American public opinion of the legality of the stay of American troops in western Berlin 14 years after the end of the war."

"The whole spirit of the speech conveys the United States Government's wish to prolong the occupation of Berlin for an indefinite time," Tass asserted.

"Eisenhower also tried to make out that the Soviet Union's peace-loving proposals on the Berlin question were a challenge to peace and United States security."

"Once again, and without any justification, he tried to convince his listeners that the Soviet Union has bellicose intentions."

Additional Comment.
By United Press International.

In East Germany the Communist ADN news service said Mr. Eisenhower let it be understood the United States will not be deterred from unleashing a new war.

Authoritative Western diplomatic quarters, while reserving formal comment, let it be known at once the President had struck at the heart of the problem and made genuine negotiations possible with the Russians—if they want them.

These quarters listed three major conclusions: The United States has closed the ranks of the Western alliance and given it fresh backing for a solid and united approach in any forthcoming dealings with the Soviets.

It is ready with its major Western allies to explore a genuine settlement with the Soviets on terms that would lead to an eventual European solution safeguarding international agreements and obligations.

But it is determined to face even the risk of war to meet and discourage aggression.

London Optimistic.

Mr. Eisenhower's declaration was particularly welcomed in London, where Prime Minister Macmillan is planning to leave tonight for Ottawa and Washington for five days of talks.

London's Daily Telegraph, a conservative paper, summed up the speech with this headline: "U.S. is Ready for Summer Summit: Mr. Eisenhower States Terms: No Buying Peace at Cost of Berlin."

The pro-Labor Daily Mirror splashed this headline: "Like Talks of Summer Summit."

In West Berlin, Mayor Willy Brandt said Mr. Eisenhower's statement "confirms our conviction that we can rely completely on our American friends."

Africans Attack British Party On Island in North Rhodesia

White Officials Fire on Spear-Carrying Natives — Two of Them Killed.

LUSAKA, Northern Rhodesia, March 17 (AP)—A band of 100 Africans attacked a party of white officials on Chilubi island last night with spears and clubs. The whites opened fire, killing two Africans. Two white officials were injured.

It was the first report of Africans being killed in clashes with whites in Northern Rhodesia.

Chilubi island is in Lake Bangweulu in the northern province of Northern Rhodesia. District commissioner G. E. Walsh had taken a group to the island. In the clash Walsh was slightly injured and J. E. Sharp, the district assistant, suffered severe injuries.

House Burned.

Air reconnaissance showed that the Africans also burned down the government rest house on the island.

Other violence reported included the burning of a storehouse at Misamfu agricultural station in the northern province near Kasama. An African beer hall was set on fire and damaged in Lusaka last night.

The Earl of Perth, Minister of State for Colonial Affairs, left Blantyre for England today after reporting security forces had this British protectorate's rebellion under control.

He took back grave doubts about the future workability of Britain's Central African Federation, made up of Nyasaland and Northern and Southern Rhodesia.

Troops and police from the Rhodesias have teamed with local security forces to do a "splendid job," he told a press conference.

Lord Perth made a five-day investigation following an outbreak of sabotage, arson and looting to back demands by the Nyasaland African National Congress for a break with the Central Federation dominated by whites in South Rhodesia and guarantees for future independence. A state of emergency was declared in South Rhodesia and Nyasaland, the African National Congress was outlawed and hundreds of its members were arrested.

Perth said he found strong opposition to the federation among "responsible Africans."

He said he had discussions with a great number of African politicians in his visit but did not meet leaders of the African National Congress.

In Salisbury, capital of the federation and of Southern Rhodesia, Enoch Dumbutshena, an African journalist who is a member of the National Congress, was refused a passport to go to the United States to take up a grant for five months of journalism study. A United States consulate official said the grant would be held open.

Nationalist mobs have forced an American missionary couple to flee from Tanganyika. The Rev. Mr. Ragnar Udd wrote of his difficulties to his brother, Magnus, here in Blantyre, and to his son Rodney, a student at Seattle (Wash.) Pacific College, a religious institution. The Rev. Mr. Udd, a minister of the Assembly of God from Raymond, Wash., and his wife, Alice, ran their Mbulu mission in the north for 14 years.

Earlier an official government spokesman said, Eisenhower had found "at the right time, the words of warning which are necessary to save the world from a catastrophe."

In Paris the statement received a warm reception. Officials said Mr. Eisenhower's intention to maintain the West's right to West Berlin and his willingness to attend a summit talk were positions advocated by President Charles de Gaulle. An official spokesman called the address "flexible in form but firm in substance" and said "France fully approves the President's stand."

Brentano said the President's formulation of a Western approach to the Berlin problem "created clarity in all its respects."

It did not work well in the municipal elections because a number of Socialists defied party orders and joined forces with the Communists.

The ministry made no attempt to compare Communist voting strength with the last municipal elections in 1953 because of the different voting systems.

REDS SHOW LOSS OF 3752 SEATS IN FRENCH VOTE

But De Gaulle's New Balloting System Fails to Wipe Out Communists.

PARIS, March 17 (AP)—The French Interior ministry announced last night the Communists wound up with fewer council seats in this month's municipal elections than they had before.

However, President Charles de Gaulle's new voting system hardly succeeded in its goal of running Communist representatives out of their elected posts throughout France.

The ministry's figures gave the Communists 20,454 seats, compared with 24,206 before—a loss of 3752. The total number of councilors elected by all parties in France's towns and villages was 469,481.

The elections involved two rounds. In the first round March 8, France's 13 largest cities named their councilors on a system of proportional representation. Candidates in the smaller cities who ran up a majority won their seats in the first round. A second round was held Sunday in towns where there were not enough majority candidates to fill the council.

The theory, outlined in De Gaulle's new constitution, was that non-Communist candidates would gang up on the Reds. All but one non-Communist candidate in each town supposedly would pull out. Then the withdrawn candidates would throw their support to the remaining non-Communist.

In last fall's legislative elections this system whittled the big Communist bloc in the National Assembly down to virtually nothing.

It did not work well in the municipal elections because a number of Socialists defied party orders and joined forces with the Communists.

The ministry made no attempt to compare Communist voting strength with the last municipal elections in 1953 because of the different voting systems.

BOOST IN STATE CIGARETTE TAX IS TENTATIVELY VOTED BY HOUSE

Cent a Package Rise, Advocated by Blair, Expected to Provide $5,000,000 a Year for Schools.

By a Staff Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch.

JEFFERSON CITY, March 17—A bill to increase the state tax on cigarettes to 3 cents from 2 cents a package was tentatively approved today by the Missouri House of Representatives.

The measure is one of the revenue-raising bills recommended by Gov. James T. Blair.

Proponents of the bill say it will provide about $5,000,000 additional revenue a year. The money would be earmarked for use of the state's public schools.

Representative George Young (Dem.), Fayette, sponsor of the bill, pointed out that increased funds would help the general revenue situation, because a smaller amount would have to be appropriated from general revenue to meet the schools' needs.

Before the tax increase measure was advanced by voice vote, the House adopted two amendments.

Cut in Discount.

One amendment would reduce the amount of discount which would be allowed wholesalers for affixing stamps. Under the amendment, the rate was reduced to 3 1/2 per cent from 4.

At present, wholesalers are allowed a 5 per cent discount, which gives them 60 cents a case. With a higher tax, under a 3 1/2 per cent discount, they would get 63 cents a case.

Under the second amendment, proposed by Representative Thomas A. Walsh (Dem.), St. Louis, a wholesaler could not have more than a 3 1/2 per cent aggregate discount for affixing state and local tax stamps. Walsh said a 5 per cent discount is now allowed for affixing St. Louis tax stamps.

Opponents of the cigarette tax increase challenged the contention that the higher rate would produce $5,000,000 in additional revenue for the state. They said the increase, if any, would be considerably less.

Might Lose Revenue.

They also contended there was a strong possibility the state would lose revenue, saying the higher tax would drive away prospective purchasers who enter border counties from other states to buy cigarettes and other items.

The cigarette tax measure is the third of Blair's recommended revenue bills to receive formal action on the House floor. The other two, providing for a use tax and a higher tax for beer, liquor and wine, were passed last week and await Senate action.

The Senate passed a bill today that would require all public schools to remain in session nine months a year to qualify for state aid. The measure was recommended by a special committee that studied the school foundation program. The bill now goes to the House.

Also passed and sent to the House was a bill for appointment by the Governor of an advisory commission on atomic energy. Five senators, five representatives and seven citizens would serve until Jan. 15, 1965.

Wage Bill Killed.

A bill introduced by Representative F. Neil Aschemeyer (Dem.) of Olivette, for a minimum wage of 75 cents an hour, was amended and then killed by a vote of 71 to 40 today. One amendment excluded all third- and fourth-class counties—107 of the 114 in the state—and another exempted all employees paid on a weekly, monthly or annual basis.

The Senate passed a bill to extend jurisdiction of the St. Louis, Kansas City and Springfield courts of appeal to civil cases involving amounts up to $15,000. The present limit is $7500. The bill would relieve the Supreme Court of many cases, it was explained.

Two measures which would increase the permissible maximum weight and height of trucks using Missouri's highways were recommended for passage yesterday by the House Committee on Roads and Highways.

At present, trucks weighing more than 60,010 pounds pay an annual fee of $900. The proposed measures would provide a top fee of $925 for trucks weighing 64,000 to 68,000 pounds.

Permissible maximum heights would be increased from 12 feet, 6 inches to 13 feet, 6 inches.

Baby Barking Deer and Impala Are Flown Into Zoo by Stork

Barking deer fawn held by PHIL ROST, head keeper at zoo's antelope house.

The antelope house at the St. Louis Zoo announced today the arrival of two new occupants. One is a baby muntjac, or barking deer, weighing about one pound. The other is a baby impala antelope.

Born at the zoo about 10 days ago, the barking deer fawn, a female, is small enough to be carried in the cupped hands. She brings the muntjac total here to four. Barking deer are native to southeast Asia.

"I've never heard them bark," said Phil Rost, head and heavier trucks on the state's highways are supported by the Missouri Bus and Truck Association.

At an earlier committee hearing, Morris Osburn, lobbyist for the railroads, spoke in opposition to the bills. He said: "What this does is to give the big trucks an additional 4000-pound load for the same price they are now paying for 64,000-pound loads."

The House, at an afternoon session yesterday, approved a bill to establish the state Office of Civil Defense as a permanent agency and give it authority to act in event of natural disasters, such as the recent tornado in St. Louis.

The measure, approved 127 to 4, also would provide for payment of volunteer workers at a rate not to exceed $3 a day.

The present law contains a provision under which the Civil Defense agency would cease to exist next August.

Among 11 bills passed by the House and sent to the Senate for consideration was one which would require milk processors to file financial statements with the State Commissioner of Agriculture.

It would also give the commissioner authority to require processors to post bond to assure payment to farmers for their milk.

Opponents of the bill said it would make the Commissioner of Agriculture a supreme dictator and would bankrupt many small processors of milk.

Another measure passed by the House would require the state Comptroller and Budget Director to make a continuing study of the administrative offices of state government, with a view toward providing greater efficiency and economy.

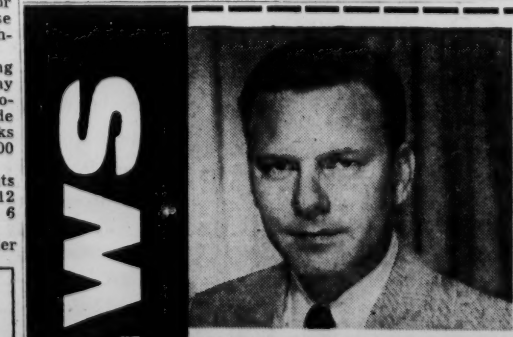

A House committee recommended passage of a bill to provide payment of state employees on a semi-monthly, instead of monthly, basis.

Debate on Shopping Center.

The Senate debated an hour today, without reaching a vote, an amendment to a bill sought by promoters of the proposed $87,500,000 stadium and shopping center in northwest St. Louis county.

The amendment, introduced by Senator John W. Noble (Dem.), Kennett, would require that any part of the project used for commercial purposes be subject to state, county and local taxes.

Senator Raymond Hopfinger (Dem.), St. Louis county, sponsor of the bill, said such an amendment in effect would kill the measure. Under present plans the center would be tax-free as a project of the Village of Champ, which was incorporated as part of the project promotion.

STATE CONTROL OF MAUSOLEUMS UP FOR HEARING PERMIT GRANTED FOR HELIPORT ON 18TH ST. GARAGE

Attempt to Put Operators Out of Business Is Charged to Monument Men.

By HERBERT A. TRASK
State Political Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch.

JEFFERSON CITY, March 17—A bill proposing rigid state regulation of construction and operation of mausoleums is "punitive legislation" aimed at putting mausoleums out of business in Missouri, a Senate committee was told yesterday.

The charge was made by Earl Stanza Sr., operator of Oak Grove cemetery and mausoleum in St. Louis county, in urging defeat of the regulatory bill sponsored by the Monument Builders of Missouri, an organization of manufacturers and dealers in grave headstones.

Stanza told the committee that mausoleums "have hurt the monument business," and the grave-marker dealers are unhappy because they cannot sell their products when bodies are interred in above-ground crypts and niches in mausoleums.

The monument dealers also are sponsoring a companion bill to establish state regulation of cemetery perpetual care funds. This proposal was vigorously opposed at the hearing by a large group of cemetery operators.

No Action Taken

Both measures are pending before the Senate Committee on Salaries, Resolutions and Miscellaneous bills, which took no action on the bills. The committee is often referred to as the Senate's "graveyard" committee, because it is expected to kill most of the measures referred to it.

Stanza charged that the mausoleum bill contained a number of "impractical and asinine" provisions which would make it impossible to build a mausoleum or construct an addition to an existing structure.

He cited a provision of the proposed law which would prohibit the sale of any crypt, niche or room in a mausoleum until the structure had been completed. He declared the provision would block the advance sale of burial space in such buildings, as is the usual practice.

Against Bill on Funds.

George V. Aylward of Kansas City, attorney for the Missouri Cemetery Association, opposed the bill to regulate funds for perpetual care of cemeteries. He charged that the bill, as written, would protect neither the public nor legitimate cemetery operators.

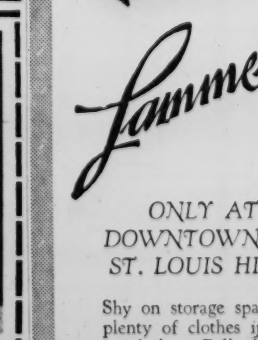

He pointed out that the bill would require cemeteries to set up a $25,000 trust fund, under jurisdiction of the circuit court, to provide for perpetual care of the grounds and lots. Such a fund would earn only $1500 a year at 6 per cent interest and would be inadequate to pay for maintenance of cemeteries.

A hearing on identical House bills was held last night by the House Committee on Governmental Organizations. William J. Becker, Clayton attorney, appeared on behalf of the sponsors and asked that the mausoleum bill be dropped. He recommended that a substitute measure be adopted with regard to cemeteries. The House committee also failed to act on the bills.

Permanent Facility Approved by City—To Be Used for Air-Taxi Service.

A permit for establishment of a permanent helicopter port on the roof of the Eighteenth Street Garage was granted today by the Board of Public Service. The port would be used for air-taxi service, it was said.

The application was signed by Miss Ethel E. Brimmer, manager of the Eighteenth Street Building Co., which operates the garage, covering the entire block bounded by Seventeenth, Eighteenth, Pine and Chestnut streets.

Recommendations that the permit be issued were written by Walter T. Malloy, director of public utilities and chairman of the Airport Commission, and Public Safety Director Joseph T. Sestric, who said architects had examined the garage building and roof structure and found it safe for use as a heliport. The proposal also was approved by the general safety inspector of the Federal Aviation Agency, it was reported.

Last November, a helicopter of the Hempl Air Taxi Service, Lambert-St. Louis field, made 15 flights from the airport to the garage roof. Robert Gorman, operations director and pilot for the Hempl service, made the tests.

In issuing the permit the board listed some conditions which must be followed. One was that the heliport be a rectangular area as near to the center of the building as possible.

Others were that the smallest dimension be at least one and one-half times as long as the length of the largest craft that will use the port, that the area be inclosed with a three-foot fence or wall, that only one craft use the port at a time, that no refueling take place on the roof and that no aviation gasoline be stored there. Also, use of the heliport must be confined to daylight hours.

Miss Brimmer said the garage roof is ready now for helicopter landings. It is of reinforced concrete construction covered with water-proofing tar. "All we have to do is move our portable fire fighting equipment to the roof and we'll be ready to go," she said. In addition to Hempl service, craft of Mississippi Valley Helicopters Inc., will use the heliport, Miss Brimmer said.

The board set April 21 as the date for receiving bids for the improvement of McCausland avenue south from Manchester avenue to Canterbury avenue. McCausland now ends at Manchester and resumes again at Canterbury. Work has been progressing on bridges over the railroad tracks in Mill Creek Valley to make McCausland a continuous north-south thoroughfare. Estimated cost of the project is $240,000, to come from bond issue funds.

On the same date, the board will receive bids for repaving Lansdowne avenue between Chippewa street and the River Des Peres at an estimated cost of $24,000. Bids also will be received for remodeling Fire Engine House No. 35 at 5450 Arsenal street. The city's estimate of this project is $85,000.

Frank Kriz, president of the board, was authorized to seek bids for four new flag poles at the Soldiers' Memorial on the Plaza. Termites have made inroads on the old poles, it was

PLANE IS LANDED IN CEMETERY; TWO ABOARD UNHURT

A four-place, single-engine plane occupied by two men made a forced landing today in Resurrection Cemetery in St. Louis county.

The plane came down in an unused part of the cemetery about 800 feet south of U. S. Highway 66 and 300 feet west of McKenzie road.

In the plane were George Hildebrandt, the pilot, who is an instructor for Midwest Aviation Inc., and his passenger, Paul Ockrassa, 7255 Marlinton lane, Atenton.

Ockrassa, a staff photographer for the St. Louis Globe-Democrat, was making aerial pictures for Lutheran organizations. Hildebrandt and Ockrassa were not hurt. The pilot was forced to land because of a failure in the fuel supply system. The plane, owned by Midwest Aviation, had taken off from Weiss Airport in the county.

PINE LAWN INVITES TRAFFIC GRIPEES AND GETS NONE

Not a single motorist has reported being "unduly delayed" by traffic on Natural Bridge avenue in Pine Lawn, the city's officials said today.

Irrked by complaints that Pine Lawn is a bottleneck because parking is permitted on Natural Bridge, the city put up signs on Natural Bridge, at the eastern and western city limits, asking motorists to write in if they were "unduly delayed" by traffic.

The signs were put up three months ago and the city is still waiting to hear from its first impeded motorist. "A lot of drivers haven't even noticed the signs," one official observed. "That must be because traffic conditions are so good in Pine Lawn that they drive too fast to see them," he asserted.

FORD PLANT HERE TO LAY OFF 300 WORKERS FRIDAY

Reduction in Force of 1320 Result of Change in Station Wagon Production.

About 300 of the 1320 production workers at the St. Louis assembly plant of the Mercury-Edsel-Lincoln Division, Ford Motor Co., Hazelwood, will be laid off Friday because of a realignment of station wagon production, it was announced today.

A company spokesman said the layoffs will be by seniority and those laid off will be re-employed as jobs become available.

In addition to policy changes in the assembly of station wagons, the spokesman said, the layoffs also were caused by an inventory adjustment. The spokesman said it had been decided to assemble all station wagons at plants in the Detroit area rather than in assembly plants throughout the country.

At present, the plant in Hazelwood assembles 240 automobiles a day. After the layoffs, the spokesman said, considerably fewer machines will roll off production lines, although the number has not been determined.

Last August, the company "furloughed" about 1200 production workers while the plant was retooled for 1959 models. Following a nationwide strike against Ford Motor Co. by the United Auto Workers' Union last fall, members of the union at the plant here did not return to work until Sept. 24. Local issues, such as work assignment, classification of employees and safety conditions in the paint shop, held up settlement of the strike here.

MAN'S THREATS ON PRESIDENT'S LIFE REPORTED

WASHINGTON, March 17 (AP)—The Secret Service has told Congress of its continuing concern about an alcoholic who it says has made repeated threat to kill President Eisenhower.

In a statement to the House Appropriations Committee, the service—which guards the President—described the man as a drifter who was confined for a time in a mental institution.

The statement, given to the committee in secret session, was made public yesterday.

Without naming the man, the service said he first came to its attention in 1953 when he tried to get an interview with the Secretary of the Treasury, then George Humphrey.

The man had been dishonorably discharged from military service, the statement said, and he wanted the treasury secretary or the President to get the discharge changed to another type.

The Secret Service then traced his record this way:

"Later, in 1956, this subject made threats against the President, making the statement, 'If I ever get close to him, I'll kill him. I have a 30-30 bullet for him.'"

"He was arrested in Glenwood Springs, Colo., March 28, 1956, and two bullets were found in his pocket. The case went to trial and on Sept. 14, 1956, he was sentenced to six months' imprisonment."

The committee was told the man was arrested in Baltimore Sept. 20, 1957, after he had set fire to a telephone booth.

"He had attempted to telephone the President and made statements that he had a gun and was going to kill the President," the Secret Service said.

"He was charged with disorderly conduct and committed to mental institution from which he was dismissed Oct. 8, 1957."

TEXT OF PRESIDENT'S TALK ON BERLIN AND U.S. DEFENSES

WASHINGTON, March 17 (AP).

The prepared text of President Eisenhower's radio-TV address last night follows:

TONIGHT I want to talk with you about two subjects:

One is about a city that lies 4000 miles away.

It is West Berlin. In a turbulent world it has been, for a decade, a symbol of freedom. But recently its name has come to symbolize, also, the efforts of imperialistic Communism to divide the free world, to throw us off balance and to weaken our will for making certain of our collective security.

Next, I shall talk to you about the state of our nation's posture of defense and the free world's capacity to meet the challenges that the Soviets incessantly pose to peace and to our own security.

First, West Berlin. You have heard much about this city recently, and possibly wondered why American troops are in it at all.

How did we get there in the first place? What responsibilities do we have in connection with it and how did we acquire them?

Why has there developed a situation surrounding this city that poses another of the recurring threats to peace that bear the stamp of Soviet manufacture?

Reviews History.

Let's begin with a brief review of recent history.

We first acquired rights and responsibilities in West Berlin as a result of World War II. Even before the war ended, when the defeat and capitulation of Nazi Germany were in sight, the Allied powers, including the Soviet Union, signed agreements defining the areas of occupation in Germany and Berlin which they would assume.

As a result, Germany and the city of Berlin, were each divided into four zones, occupied by American, British, French and Soviet troops.

Under the wartime agreements I have mentioned, the Western Allies entered into occupation of West Berlin and withdrew our armies from the Soviet Zone. Accordingly, the boundary of the Soviet Zone, like our presence in Berlin, was established upon the basis of these same agreements.

Also by agreement among the occupying powers, the Western Allies—the United States, the United Kingdom and France—were guaranteed free access to Berlin.

Here in my office is a map of Germany. The light portion of the map is West Germany—the darker portion is East Germany. The lighter gray lanes are the air corridors to Berlin—and the dotted lines show both the main roads and railroads that give access to the city. Notice that the city of Berlin is 110 miles inside East Germany—110 miles from the nearest boundary of West Germany.

Freedom the Objective.

Shown also is the territory, now in East Germany that was taken by our army in World War II and was turned over to the Russians by political agreement made before the end of the war.

At the end of World War II our announced purpose and that of our wartime associates was the pacification and eventual unification of Germany under freedom.

We jointly agreed to undertake this task. Ever since that time, the United States has continuously recognized the obligation of the Allied governments under international law to reach a just peace settlement with Germany and not to prolong the occupation of Germany unnecessarily.

The public record demonstrates clearly that such a settlement has been frustrated only by the Soviets. It quickly became evident that Soviet leaders were not interested in a free unified Germany, and were determined to induce or force the Western powers to leave Berlin.

Ten years ago Senator John Foster Dulles, now our great Secretary of State, described the basic purpose of the Soviet Government. He said that purpose was "no less than world domination to be achieved by gaining political power successively in each of the many areas which had been afflicted by war, so that in the end the United States, which was openly called the main enemy, would be isolated and closely encircled."

The current Berlin effort of the Soviets falls within the pattern of this basic purpose.

The first instance of unusual pressure, clearly evidencing these purposes, came in 1948 when the Communists imposed a blockade to force the protecting Western troops out of Berlin and to starve the people of the city into submission.

Rights Reconfirmed.

This plan failed. A free people and a dramatic airlift broke the back of the Communists' scheme.

In the end the Communists abandoned the blockade and concluded an agreement in 1949 with the Western powers, reconfirming our right of unrestricted access.

Then, last November, the Soviets announced that they intended to repudiate these solemn obligations. They once more appear to be living by the Communist formula that "promises are like pie crusts, made to be broken."

The Soviet Government has also announced its intention to enter into a peace treaty with the East German puppet regime. The making of this treaty, the Soviets assert, will deny our occupation rights and our rights of access. It is, of course, clear that no so-called "peace treaty" between the Soviets and the East German regime can have any moral or legal effect upon our rights. The Soviet threat has since been repeated several times, accompanied by various and changing suggestions for dealing with the status of the city. Their proposals have included a vague offer to make the western part of Berlin—though not the eastern part, which the Soviets control—a so-called "free city."

It is by no means clear what West Berlin would be free from, except perhaps freedom itself. It would not be free from the ever-present danger of Communist domination. No one, certainly not the 2,000,000 West Berliners, can ignore the cold fact that this part of Berlin is surrounded by many divisions of Soviet and Eastern German troops and by territory governed by authorities dedicated to eliminating freedom from the area.

As a matter of principle, the United States cannot accept the asserted right of any government to break, by itself, solemn agreement to which we, with others, are parties. But in the Berlin situation, both free people and principle are at stake.

What, then, are the fundamental choices we have in this situation?

First, of course, there is the choice which the Soviet rulers themselves would like us to make. They hope that we can be frightened into abdicating our rights—which are indeed responsibilities—to help establish a just and peaceful solution to the German problem—rights which American and Allied soldiers purchased with their lives.

We have no intention of forgetting our rights or of deserting a free people. Soviet rulers should remember that free men have, before this, died for so-called "peace of paper" which represented duty and honor and freedom.

The shirking of our responsibilities would solve no problems for us. It would mean the end of all hopes for a Germany under government of German choosing. It would raise, among our friends, the most serious doubts about the validity of all the international agreements and commitments we have made with them in every quarter of the globe. One result would be to undermine the mutual confidence upon which our entire system of collective security is founded.

Choice Unacceptable.

This, the Soviets would greet as a great victory over the West.

Obviously, this choice is unacceptable to us.

The second choice which the Soviets have compelled us to face, is the possibility of war.

Certainly, the American and Western peoples do not want war. The whole world knows this. Global conflict under modern conditions could mean the destruction of civilization. The Soviet rulers, themselves, are well aware of this fact.

But all history has taught us the grim lesson that no nation has ever been successful in avoiding the terrors of war by refusing to defend its rights—by attempting to placate aggression.

Whatever risk of armed conflict may be inherent in the present Berlin situation, it was deliberately created by the Soviet rulers.

The justice of our position is attested by the fact that it is ardently supported with virtual unanimity by the people of West Berlin.

The risk of war is minimized if we stand firm. War would become more likely if we gave way and encouraged a rule of terrorism rather than a rule of law and order. Indeed, this is the core of the peace policy which we are striving to carry out throughout the world. In that policy is found the world's best hope for peace.

Our final choice is negotiation, even while we continue to provide for our security against every threat. We are seeking meaningful negotiation at this moment. The United States and its allies stand ready to talk with Soviet representatives at any time and under any circumstances which offer prospects of worthwhile results.

We have no selfish material aims in view. We seek no domination over others—only a just peace for the world and particularly, in this instance, for the people most involved.

We are ready to consider all proposals which may help to reassure and will take into account the European peoples most concerned.

We are willing to listen to new ideas and are prepared to present others. We will do everything within our power to bring about serious negotiations and to make these negotiations meaningful.

But let us remind ourselves again of what we cannot do.

We cannot try to purchase peace by forsaking 2,000,000 free people of Berlin.

We cannot agree to any permanent and compulsory division of the German nation, which would leave Central Europe a perpetual powder mill, even though we are ready to discuss with all affected nations any reasonable methods of its eventual unification.

We cannot recognize the asserted right of any nation to dishonor its international agreements whenever it chooses. If we should accept such a contention the whole process of negotiation would become a barren mockery.

We must not, by weakness or irresolution, increase the risk of war.

Finally, we cannot, merely for the sake of demonstrating so-called "flexibility" accept any agreement or arrangement which would undermine the security of the United States and its allies.

The Soviet note of March 2nd appears to be a move toward negotiation on an improved basis. We would never negotiate under a dictated limit or agenda, or on other unreasonable terms. We are, with our allies, however, in view of the changed tone Soviet note, considering a reply to that note.

It is my hope that thereby all of us can reach agreement with the Soviets on an early meeting at the level of Foreign Ministers.

Position Stated.

Assuming developments that justify a summer meeting at the summit, the United States would be ready to participate in this further effort.

Our position, then, is this: We will not retreat one inch from our duty. We shall continue to exercise our right of peaceful passage to and from West Berlin. We will not be the first to breach the peace; it is the Soviets who threaten the use of force to interfere with such free passage. We are ready to participate fully in every sincere effort at negotiation that will respect the existing rights of all and their opportunity to live in peace.

Today's Berlin difficulty is not the first stumbling block that international Communism has placed along the road to peace. The world has enjoyed little relief from tension in the past dozen years. As long as the Communist empire continues to seek world domination, we shall have to face threats to the peace, of varying character and location. We have lived and will continue to live in a period where emergencies manufactured by the Soviets follow one another like beads on a string.

Whatever the length of that period, we shall have to remain continuously ready to repel aggression, whether it be political, economic or military.

Every day our policies of peace will be subjected to test. We must have steadiness and resolution, and firm adherence to our own carefully thought-out policies.

We must avoid letting fear or lack of confidence turn us from the course that self-respect, decency and love of liberty point out. To do so would be to dissipate the creative energies of our people, upon whom our real security rests. This we will never do.

To build toward peace and maintain free world security will require action in every field of human enterprise. It can only be done by the nations of the free world working together in close co-operation, adjusting their differences, sharing their common burdens, pursuing their common goals. We are carrying out just such an effort. We call it mutual security.

Big Burden Alone.

We recognize that freedom is indivisible. Wherever in the world freedom is destroyed, by that much is every free nation hurt.

If the United States, alone, had to carry the full burden of defending its interests from the Communist threat, we would have to draft a much larger portion of our manhood into the armed services, spend many more billions of treasure and put a more intense strain on all our resources and capabilities. We would become more and more like a garrison state.

Fortunately, we do not have to adopt such a desperate course. Nearly 50 nations have joined with us in a co-operative effort to protect freedom.

This system of mutual security allows each nation to provide the forces which it is best able to supply.

What is the strength of these forces? What can we count on from our allies? Let's look first at our own contribution. Let us look at it from the viewpoint of our own security.

Of late I—and I am sure the American people—have heard or read conflicting claims about our defenses.

We have heard that our military posture has been subordinated to a balanced budget, to the jeopardy of our national defense.

We have heard that our defenses are presently—or they will be sometime in the future—inadequate to meet recurrent Communist threats.

We have heard that more manpower in our forces than I have recommended is essential in the present circumstances, for psychological reasons if for no other.

My friends, such assertions as these are simply not true. They are without foundation. It is not likely, however, that such assertions will lead the Soviet Union to miscalculate our true strength—and this is indeed fortunate.

The design of our defense is the product of the best composite judgment available for the fulfillment of our security needs.

We are devoting great sums for the maintenance of forces capable of nuclear retaliatory strikes. This capability is our indispensable deterrent to aggression against us.

The central core of our deterrent striking force is our Strategic Air Command with its long-range bombers. They are reinforced by naval aircraft and missiles of varying types, and tactical fighter bombers. This array will soon include weapons of even greater power and effectiveness.

The capacity of our combined striking forces represents an almost unimaginable destructive power. It is protected by a vast early warning system and powerful air defense forces.

More and more this great retaliatory force will feature intermediate as well as long-range missiles capable of reaching any target on earth. As we steadily go through the transition period from bomber to missile as the backbone of this striking force, we nevertheless continue replacing bombers, powerful as we know them now to be, with others of greater power, greater range and greater speed. In this way we take care of the needs of this year and those immediately ahead, even as we plan, develop and build for the future.

We are engaged in an endless process of research, development and production to equip our forces with new weapons.

This process is tremendously costly, even should we consider it only in terms of money. If we are to master the problem of security over a prolonged period of time, we cannot forever borrow from the future to meet the needs of the present.

Therefore, we must concentrate our resources on those things we need most, minimizing those programs that make less decisive contributions to our nation. Effective defense comes first.

Today there is no defense field to which we are devoting more talent, skill and money than that of missile development.

I'd like to have you look at three lists of missiles.

The first list shows 17 different types of missiles now in use by our armed forces.

The second list shows missiles that will be available for use in 1959. There are 11 different types.

The third list shows 13 more types of missiles now in the research and development stages. In all there are 41 types of missiles.

There is, of course, a constant parade of improvement, with newer and better weapons constantly crowding out the older, the less efficient ones.

Nuclear Ships Cited.

The first model of any new piece of equipment is always relatively primitive. The first sewing machine, the first typewriter, the first automobile—left much to be desired. And even the rockets that dazzle us today will soon become the model T's—the tin lizzies—of the missile age.

We must never become frozen in obsolescence.

In addition to the forces comprising our retaliatory striking power, we have potent and flexible naval, ground and amphibious elements. We have a growing array of nuclear-powered ships, both submarines and surface vessels.

World-wide development of Army divisions, including missile units, increases the ability of the United States Army and the Marines to rapidly apply necessary force to any troubled area. At home, the Strategic Army Corps is ready and able to move promptly as needed to any area of the world.

I believe the American people want, are entitled to, can indefinitely pay for, now have and will continue to have a modern, effective and adequate military establishment.

In this over-all conviction, I am supported by the mass of the best military opinion. I can mobilize, and by scientific and every other kind of talent that is giving its attention to a problem to which I personally have devoted a lifetime.

As all thoughtful citizens know, our own security requires the supplemental and reinforcing strength provided by the free world's total.

In the Far East, nations with which we are associated in a common defense system have over 1,000,000 trained soldiers standing watch over the free world's frontiers.

In Europe, the efforts of 15 nations are united to support freedom.

In global totals, our friends are contributing over 200 ground divisions, 30,000 aircraft, and 2500 combatant naval vessels to the task of defending the free world.

For every soldier we have under arms, our free world allies have five.

Through each of these stout efforts we strengthen the bonds of freedom.

Our mutual security program supports this joint undertaking by helping to equip our partners with the weapons they cannot by themselves provide, and by helping them keep their economies strong.

This mutual effort provides a constructive, long-term answer to the recurrent crises engineered by the Communists. It strengthens the stability of free nations, and lessens opportunities for Communist subversion and penetration. It supports economic growth and gives hope and confidence to the cause of freedom. It is America's strongest instrument for positive action in the world today.

Last Friday I sent to the Congress a special message presenting my recommendations for this important part of our defense and security program for the coming year. In my judgment, there is no better means of showing our resolution, our firmness, and our understanding of the Communist challenge than to support this program in full measure.

These funds are vital to our national and free world security.

Any misguided effort to reduce them below what I have recommended weakens the sentries of freedom wherever they stand.

In this conviction, also, I am supported by the military experts of our government.

Fellow Americans, of one thing I am sure: That we have the courage and capacity to meet the stern realities of the present and the future. We need only to understand the issues and to practice the self-discipline that freedom demands.

Our security shield is the productivity of our free economy, the power of our military forces, and the enduring might of a great community of nations determined to defend their freedom.

We have been, from the beginning, a free people—people who by their spiritual and moral strength and their love of country provide the mainspring for all we have done, are doing, and will do. In these truths we place our faith.

Together with our allies we Missouri and others who have claimed that our present defenses are inadequate, or soon will be, to meet Communist threats, he told his nation-wide audience:

"My friends, such assertions as these are simply not true. They are without foundation. It is not likely, however, that such assertions will lead the Soviet Union to miscalculate our true strength—and this is indeed fortunate."

In defense of his foreign aid recommendations, which are likely to be reduced by "economy-minded" Republicans and Democrats, the President said the mutual security program is a constructive, long-term answer to Communist threats:

"It is America's strongest instrument for positive action in the world today. . . . In my judgment there is no better means of showing our resolution, our firmness and our understanding of the Communist challenge than to support this program in full measure."

Most of the report related to Berlin—how it came to be occupied, what responsibilities were taken by the victorious powers and why the Soviet Union could not alone repudiate its agreements with its former allies.

Two TV Props Used.

Two television props were used, not successfully, to emphasize that Berlin is 110 miles within Soviet occupied territory and to explain the missiles program.

One was a map of Germany showing the air and surface lanes the Western powers are entitled to use to get in and out of West Berlin. The other was a chart listing the missiles now in use, those which will be available this year and those under active research and development which are expected to be available at some undisclosed time.

While Mr. Eisenhower read slowly from his prepared text, Robert Montgomery, his radio and television adviser, used a pointer on the map and chart. The figures on the latter were too small and indistinct to be read by the television viewer.

The President stressed by repetition that the present Berlin crisis was manufactured by the Kremlin and that this situation was part of the Communists' basic pattern to achieve world domination.

He said Russia's repudiation of its solemn obligations about Germany and Berlin conferred to the Communist formula that "promises are like pie crusts, made to be broken."

Later he warned that similar emergencies will be manufactured by Soviets "like beads on a string."

Cites Soviet Obligation.

Soviet Russia, he said, was both morally and legally bound to live up to its agreements and that no so-called "peace treaty" between the Soviets and the East German regime could have any effect on their rights.

"As a matter of principle," he continued, "the United States cannot accept the right of any government to break, by itself, solemn agreements to which we,

with others, are parties. But in the Berlin situation, both free people and principle are at stake."

The United States, he pointed out, had three fundamental choices:

1. To be frightened by the Soviet rulers into abdicating our rights which American and Allied soldiers purchased with their lives.

"We have no intention," he said, "of forgetting our rights or of deserting a free people. Soviet rulers should remember that free men have, before this, died for so-called 'scraps of paper' which presented duty and honor and freedom."

The shirking of our responsibilities in Berlin, he said, would undermine the mutual confidence upon which our entire system of collective security is founded. "Obviously, this choice is unacceptable to us," he said firmly.

2. To go to war with the Soviet Union.

"The American and Western people do not want war," he said. "Global conduct under modern conditions could mean the destruction of civilization. The Soviet rulers, themselves, are well aware of this fact."

"But all history has taught us the grim lesson that no nation has ever been successful in avoiding the terrors of war by refusing to defend its rights—by attempting to placate aggression."

It was at this point that he said the risk of war would be minimized if we stand firm.

3. To negotiate while continuing to provide for our security against every threat.

This was the choice he accepted with conditional agreement for a summit conference of heads of governments.

He listed, however, what the United States would not do:

A. Try to purchase peace by forsaking the 2,000,000 free people of Berlin.

B. Agree to any "permanent or compulsory division of the German nation," which would leave central Europe a perpetual powder keg.

C. Recognize the asserted right of any nation to dishonor its international obligations whenever it chooses.

D. Increase the risk of war by weakness or irresolution.

E. Accept for reasons of "flexibility" any agreement or arrangement that would undermine the security of the United States and its allies.

Many Stumbling Blocks.

From the thesis that Berlin is only one stumbling block international Communism has placed along the road to peace, and will not be the last, the President went on to reply to those Congressional critics who want to spend more for defense and those who want to spend less on overseas aid.

The United States, he said, must remain continuously ready, for whatever the period, to repel aggression whether it be political, economic or military.

To the critics of his $40,900,000,000 military program for the next fiscal year, he asserted that the design of our defense is the product of "the best composite judgment available for the fulfillment of our security needs."

As in the past, he said that the central core of our deterrent striking force is our Strategic Air Command with its long-range bombers reinforced by naval aircraft, missiles of various types and tactical fighting bombers. He added this array would "soon" include weapons of ever greater power and effectiveness.

Transition Period.

From this SAC base, he said, the Administration's defense program is going through a transition period to make missiles the backbone of our striking force.

"In this way," he said, "we take care of the needs of this year and those immediately ahead, even as we plan, develop and build for the future."

At this point a television camera was focused on the lists of 41 missiles in being, in production and in the research and development stage.

Remarking that "we must never be frozen in obsolescence," he said this about the present missiles:

"The first model of any new piece of equipment is always relatively primitive. The first sewing machine, the first typewriter, the first automobile—left much to be desired. And even the rockets that dazzle us today will soon become the model Ts—the Tin Lizzies—of the missile age."

To critics opposing his proposed cuts in the manpower of the Army and the Marine Corps, Mr. Eisenhower said the world-wide deployment of Army divisions, including missile units, and the Marines, increased their ability "to rapidly apply necessary force to any troubled spot." At home, he added, the Strategic Army Corps is ready and able to move to any area of the world.

Calls Forces Adequate.

As to the adequacy and the cost of the Administration's program, he said:

"I believe the American people want, are entitled to, can indefinitely pay for, now have and will continue to have a modern, effective and adequate military establishment. In this over-all conviction, I am supported by the mass of the best military opinion I can mobilize, and by scientific and every other kind of talent giving its attention to a problem to which I personally have devoted a lifetime."

To the foreign aid critics, he said the funds he had requested "are vital to our national and free world security." In this conviction, he added, he is supported by the military experts of our government.

Concluding the address, which he read with his head down and without gestures, the President said we need only to understand the issues and to practice the self-discipline that freedom demands.

"Together with our Allies," he said, "we stand firm wherever the probing finger of an aggressor may point. Thus we lessen the risk of aggression; thus we shall with resolution and courage struggle ever forward to the dream of a just and permanent peace."

that they, in time and in their turn, will be replaced by other city officials. Today no one can say who they will be, nor anything about their motives in seeking and gaining office.

"We, further, are opposed to the bill because, in our opinion no governor would be able to persuade honest and conscientious citizens to serve on the Board of Police Commissioners if this bill were to become law."

"The Board would have the heavy responsibility of setting police department policies and procedures that would make St. Louis safe for its honest citizens and unsafe for criminals and gangsters, but would have no effective authority to put them into practice."

"Authority is with those who control the purse strings."

"The governor, to whom the police board is directly responsible, is in a position removed from local pressures. A reckless board could be instantly removed by him. The courts, furthermore, would have little patience with an improvident and irresponsible board."

Reviewing the financial squabble, Priest said the controversy might never have taken place were it not for the "serious financial plight of the city."

He said city revenues have been decreasing while the demand for services, including police protection, has increased.

"One of the factors behind the city's financial plight is the fundamental change that has been taking place in the population of the city of St. Louis, and continues to take place," the Police Board president continued.

"Thousands upon thousands of poor people from agricultural areas have been moving into St. Louis each year. For the most part, they come without money, without jobs, and without property."

"It is true that most of these newcomers to St. Louis are Negroes, but this is not basically a Negro problem. Many of the newcomers are economically distressed white families."

"Our records show that crime is at bad in a white slum as it is in a Negro slum, and sometimes it is worse."

A teen-age dope peddler tells his shocking story

In this week's Saturday Evening Post you'll read the true, brutal story of a young hoodlum's road to crime—told in his own tape-recorded words. You'll meet "Tony"...

- at eleven when he went on a wild rampage at school—ripping books, smearing paint, hurling goldfish against the wall.

- at fifteen when he took over a teen-age gang—mugging, stealing, stabbing.

- at sixteen when he was a big-time dope pusher—wearing cashmere suits and sporting expensive dames.

- at seventeen when he started serving a 5-year rap for dope peddling.

- at twenty when he met Maggie—the girl he had to marry and who changed his life.

MAKING OF MISSILES CALLED DETECTABLE

The manufacture as well as the testing of missiles capable of carrying nuclear warheads can be detected, Walter Morgan, a production engineer for McDonnell Aircraft Corp., said last night.

Most missile components, such as guidance systems, are so precise in their machining that any plant found to be doing such delicate work could be presumed to be in the business of manufacturing missile parts," Morgan said.

He addressed a meeting sponsored by the Women's International League for Peace and Freedom at the home of Dr. and Mrs. Theodore Lentz, 5937 Enright avenue. The meeting was the second of three dealing with detecting violations of disarmament agreements.

A "comprehensive and massive" detection system would require 30,000 trained observers in the United States alone, the speaker said, adding that "peace would be as expensive as war."

He said those employed by a government to check for disarmament violations would have to be as highly trained as those engaged in the manufacture of nuclear weapons. For that reason, in addition to the fact that elaborate equipment would be required, a detection program would cost billions of dollars, he said.

MEHLVILLE DISPUTE OVER SCHOOL HEAD

James W. Ash, president of the Mehlville R-9 Board of Education, today asserted that a controversy that has split the board and resulted in an injunction suit is over whether to retain Superintendent Kermit O. Bierbaum.

Three members of the board, George Keller, Ben Schnell and Mrs. Mildred Cerebellus, obtained a temporary injunction last March 6 to prevent Ash from calling daily meetings to settle the matter of Bierbaum's contract.

Ash declared that a contention by the three members that they were not opposed to retaining Bierbaum was "absolutely untrue since the entire controversy revolves about the fact that those three members do not want to retain Mr. Bierbaum, who has done an outstanding job as superintendent for the district."

Ash also challenged an allegation in the injunction suit to the effect that since Bierbaum's contract does not expire until next year, a new contract at this time, before April's school board election, would be a circumvention of law.

Ash said that in calling a special meeting on March 5 he was attempting to follow policies and procedures of the board that call for consideration of the contract and salary of the superintendent on or before the regular March meeting each year. He said this procedure has been in effect since 1951. He said the procedure had been followed in 1955, 1956 and 1957, when the board canceled existing contracts with Bierbaum and awarded him new ones.

The meeting March 5 was attended by all but Schnell, Ash said. Ash, Clarence J. Wohlwend and W. Oliver Winney voted to give Bierbaum a new contract, while Mrs. Cerebellus and Keller voted against the contract, Ash said.

Ash said he called another meeting for the following evening in an effort to resolve the dispute, but the injunction prevented it from being held.

The filing of the injunction suit was "an attempt to improperly influence the voters of the district at the April 7 election" against himself and Wohlwend, who are candidates for re-election, Ash said.

Circuit Judge Fred E. Mueller has scheduled a hearing Friday at Clayton on the injunction.

SCHOOL BOARD CANDIDATE

Mrs. Buckowitz Wants School Departments to Be Autonomous

(Third in a series of articles describing school board candidates and their programs. Four board members will be elected April 7.)

The Board of Education can keep the five departments in the school system under closer scrutiny if the departments remain autonomous, Mrs. Louis W. Buckowitz, a candidate for election to the board, said today.

Mrs. Buckowitz said she is opposed to bringing the building department under the control of the superintendent of instruction, as has been suggested over the years—without success—by some board members.

"I feel that all departments should answer to the board in order that any defects or deficiencies in operation may immediately be brought to its attention," she said.

Against Civil Service.

The candidate, who is the wife of the Tenth Ward Democratic committeeman, said she is against instituting civil service for non-teaching employees in the school system. Such action has been proposed as a means of reducing attempts by school board members to influence the hiring, firing, promotion and demotion of employees.

Mrs. Buckowitz is opposed to an increase in the present school tax of $1.51 on each $100 of assessed property valuation. She said "if the budget permits" she would support a pay increase for school teachers.

"However, I do not feel that taxes should be raised for this," she said. Mrs. Buckowitz is the only woman among the 11 candidates trying for four board seats in the April 7 municipal elections.

The deficit which board members say the school system will face next year unless school taxes are increased could probably be met "by securing a balance in the spending," she said.

The candidate views favorably suggestions for a free city college here, saying she thinks it could be operated jointly by the school board and the state.

Mrs. Buckowitz, who is seeking public office for the first time, operates a card shop at 2818 Cherokee street and lives at 3515 Oerger avenue. She is 40 years old and has one daughter, a pupil at Maryville College. The candidate attended elementary school and business school.

She has been endorsed by the St. Louis Labor Council's Committee on Political Education and many south side Democratic ward organizations. She is active in political, charitable, business and educational groups.

OXYGEN TANKS FOR VEHICLES AT ANIMAL SHELTER

(Picture in Everyday Magazine.)

Ambulances of the Animal Protective Association of Missouri here soon will be outfitted with portable oxygen tanks.

James Ray, field supervisor, said today the association has experimented with the tanks and found them extremely helpful. How will they be used? "Just like with people," Ray said. "Say a dog is hit by a car and stunned, suffering from shock. We give him a couple of shots of oxygen and bring him around. We make sure he stays alive until we can get him to the hospital. Or they will be useful in cases of old dogs that have heart attacks."

Ray said all drivers will be trained by veterinarians in the use of the oxygen tanks.

holder committee which drafted the district plan. "Everybody talks about the transportation problem, but what is the problem?"

Problem Not Regulation.
"If regulation is the problem, why not regulate the other utilities, too? Our problem is not regulation; it is insufficient customers and high operating costs."

Burke said the Missouri Public Service Commission is experienced and is handling its job well, providing uniformity and stability of regulation. To have a district authority regulate mass transit here would be costly duplication and would mean setting out on "an untrod path," he asserted.

Public Service Co. is taking no position on the question of the public wants a private ownership, the attorney continued.

"This is a matter for the public to consider," he declared. "Our experience shows that the public wants a private operator to do many things that cannot be accomplished by strictly private operation. There are demands for service important only to individuals."

A Stopping Point.
"There is a point beyond which a private business operation cannot go and remain in business. At that point some form of public ownership or some form of subsidy must enter."

Burke said that Chicago, Boston, New York, Detroit, Seattle and San Francisco all have some form of governmental ownership of mass transportation. The Chicago Transit Authority makes no profit, although fares in Chicago are higher than in St. Louis, he added.

Bankers and others who provide financing for business operations have required that fare rates be kept at levels necessary to pay expenses, cover depreciation and service the debt, Burke emphasized, suggesting that the freeholders make this a requirement for any public transit authority.

Cincinnati and Toledo have "fare escalators" which provide for automatic increases when income does not meet the par figure set to cover operating expenses and afford a certain level of profit, he reported.

Profit Under 5 Per Cent.
Burke said Public Service Co.'s profit last year, based on a $20,000,000 value, was less than 5 per cent. "There is much criticism of fares from the emotional standpoint," he asserted. "There is a lot of criticism every time people miss a bus in the rain, but since the war, we have had no formal complaint regarding service."

The district authority plan being considered by the freeholders would empower the agency to exempt local mass transportation facilities from certain state and local taxes "if fares would be substantially reduced thereby."

Henry Wright, spokesman for the St. Louis section, American Society of Civil Engineers, urged that the freeholders take steps to prevent municipalities from eroding the area-wide master plan of land use that would be drafted under the district agency setup.

"Municipalities should have power only to recommend changes in the master plan, but not to make any changes themselves," he declared. "Control should lie solely in the district authority. Even zoning power should be taken away from local communities."

A public hearing on the city-county merger plan was scheduled this afternoon at the Board of Freeholders office, 6611 Clayton road. Another hearing on the district plan will be held tomorrow at 3 p.m.

Iraq Struggle

In the past have shown adeptness in shifting policy to suit the occasion. In their bitter exchange yesterday both stopped short of even threatening an outright break in relations.

Appreciates 'Friendship.'
Nasser said the U.A.R. appreciates Soviet friendship as long as it is kept on a basis of non-interference in the internal affairs of other nations. Khrushchev said future relations between the Soviet Union and the U.A.R. will, "I think, continue as before."

(United Press International said the Middle East News Agency reported from Damascus that the Iraqi government has arrested Mahdy I. Kubba, a member of the three-man sovereignty council, which exercises presidential duties. The news agency said the arrest was at the instigation of powerful Communists.)

Red Inquiry for Chicago.
WASHINGTON, March 17 (AP)—A spokesman for the House Committee on Un-American Activities said yesterday the committee's investigation into Communist infiltration into heavy industry may be directed soon at the Chicago area. The spokesman said nothing definite has been arranged, but preliminary work has been done by investigators.

reduction in the army to 870,000 men. The Eisenhower Administration plans to complete this force reduction by June 30.

When Edwin L. Weisl, chief counsel for the subcommittee, pressed him about the manpower cuts, Burke testified:

"In my judgment, with the funds that are available, the personnel reductions were justified."

Weisl noted that Burke had protested against a cut in navy strength and asked:

"You believe that it was unwise, do you not?"

"Yes, sir," Burke replied. "You similarly believe that it was unwise to cut the Marine corps?" Weisl pressed.

"That is correct," Burke said. "The security of the country is not jeopardized, in my opinion, now, sir."

Weisl asked whether "in view of the world situation do we have minimum security for the national defense in the Army, in the Navy and in the Air Force?"

"Yes, sir," Burke replied.

Triple-Threat Weapon.

By United Press International
Senator Styles Bridges proposed today that the United States key its defenses to a triple-threat "ultimate weapon" involving mobile and strongly fortified missile systems.

The New Hampshire Republican said he thinks the Senate preparedness subcommittee, of which he is a top ranking G.O.P. member, may make similar recommendations.

His statement followed testimony by Adm. Arleigh A. Burke, chief of naval operations, that a continued worsening of the Berlin crisis might require moves "within a month" to strengthen the armed services.

Bridges based his proposal for an "ultimate defense on the Navy's submarine-fired Polaris and the Air Force's Minuteman missiles—both still under development—and the Atlas and Titan intercontinental ballistic missiles.

He conceded such a missile program might add to net defense costs.

Red Spies Try to Enter U.S. As Refugees, Ex-Agent Says

WASHINGTON, March 17 (AP) — The Kremlin, hard-pressed to recruit spies in America, tries to slip agents into this country in the guise of refugees seeking political asylum, a former Soviet officer contends.

His report on Russian espionage is contained in testimony published yesterday by the House Committee on Un-American Activities.

The witness, Petr S. Deriabin, was identified as a 38-year-old former Soviet intelligence agent who defected to the West in 1954. The committee described him as "thoroughly reliable, trustworthy and in all respects bona fide."

Under questioning, Deriabin said the Soviet intelligence system often uses phony defectors to infiltrate free nations.

"It is very hard now for Soviets to put their own agents inside the United States or other Western countries," he said. "It is very hard to recruit, actually, American people to be Soviet spies."

"For this reason," Deriabin added, "they are using their own agents. They order them to go to the United States under political asylum . . . and then become Soviet spies."

Some agents, known as sleepers, may wait 10 years before receiving a signal to start their spy operations, the witness said.

Deriabin said the agents work under Soviet embassies, the Russian News Agency Tass and Soviet trade and international organizations.

Deriabin, who said he was a member of the group charged with guarding Soviet leaders, painted a lurid picture of how the Kremlin brass spend their spare time.

He told of drinking and wild parties.

"Soviet leaders do not work for their own people. They are working and living just for themselves," he said.

"Every Soviet leader has his own private life and the people don't know how they live . . . All of them have good houses, which belong to the government. They have private hospitals, stores, drugs and private homes . . ."

PEIPING SAYS OFFICERS HAVE SERVED TIME AS PRIVATES

HONG KONG, March 17 (AP) — Peiping says almost every officer in the Chinese Communist armed forces — up to and including generals — now has put in time as a buck private under a new program of so-called democratization.

The official People's Daily reports the number runs well over 100,000, or more than 80 per cent of the officers in all services since the program started last September.

Tokyo Subway Grows.
TOKYO, March 17 (AP)—A new 3.6-mile stretch of track has been opened in Tokyo's expanding subway system. The new run links a populous suburban center with an area of government buildings. It is expected to carry 400,000 persons a day.

HOUSE COMMITTEE OK'S TVA PLAN TO FINANCE ITSELF

WASHINGTON, March 17 (UPI)—The House Public Works Committee approved today a self-financing plan for the Tennessee Valley Authority area.

The committee, by a 19 to 14 vote, approved a bill to allow TVA to sell bonds to the public to raise $750,000,000 to finance further expansion of its power facilities.

President Eisenhower recommended the legislation, but proposed that the bond-issuing authority be subjected to control of the Budget Bureau. The committee rejected the proposed budgetary control, leaving the bond issuing authority to the discretion of the TVA.

The controversial self-financing plan was proposed after Congress had repeatedly refused to appropriate funds for construction of additional TVA power-generating plants.

Uses Steam Plants.

TVA has long since tapped the full hydroelectric power potential of the area, requiring use of steam plants to provide additional power.

The self-financing plan won Senate approval last year and cleared the House Public Works Committee near the end of the session, but the bill died in a pigeonhole in the conservative-dominated House Rules Committee.

Speaker Sam Rayburn promised at that time that he would see to it that the bill reached the House floor for a vote this year, if its backers could push it through the House Public Works Committee early in the session. They did that today.

The final outcome is still in doubt. Many foes of public power have opposed the self-financing plan, as well as use of direct Treasury funds to finance TVA's expansion. The plan also faces sharp opposition from lawmakers from areas of high power costs who contend their areas are losing industry to the TVA area.

The House Rules Committee cleared for a House vote, a deeply-cut Democratic federal airport construction aid bill.

The measure would provide $297,000,000 in federal subsidies to airports over the next four years. This is $168,000,000 less than provided in a Senate-passed bill but $97,000,000 more than President Eisenhower requested.

Chairman Oren Harris (Dem.), Arkansas, of the House Commerce Committee said he believed the Democratic version could escape a veto.

Military Building Bill.

The House Armed Services Committee approved a bill authorizing $1,190,050,000 for military construction in the year beginning July 1.

The figure is $109,247,000 less than President Eisenhower proposed in his budget message last January.

Committee Chairman Carl Vinson (Dem.), Georgia, said he would seek Rules Committee approval next Tuesday to send the bill to the House floor on March 25. He said he hoped the House would approve the measure before the Easter recess starting March 26.

The measure would merely authorize construction of projects at United States military bases throughout the world. Money must be appropriated in separate legislation.

The House Commerce Committee began public hearings yesterday on fair trade bills which Chairman Oren Harris (Dem.), Arkansas, said would protect small business men from "unrestrained cut-throat competition."

Two witnesses—one representing 120,000 small business men and the other the nation's drug industry—called for swift approval of a national fair trade bill.

Edward Wimmer, of Cincinnati, O., vice president of the National Federation of Independent Business Men, said the measure would improve the "moral health" of the economy.

Part of his testimony and that of Maurice Mermey of New York City, a director of the Bureau of Education on Fair Trade which was set up by the nation's drug industry, were challenged by Representative John D. Dingell (Dem.), Michigan.

Dingell contended that a section of one fair trade bill favored by both witnesses would violate present anti-trust laws against restraint of trade and price-fixing.

Members of Congress and federal employees who earn more than $12,500 a year would be required to disclose the source of all their income annually under a bill introduced by Representative Robert Kas-

ESTIMATE BOARD SHOULD BE BIPARTISAN, GARSCHKE SAYS

Both political parties should be represented on the city's Board of Estimate and Apportionment, Richard L. Garschke, Republican candidate for president of the Board of Aldermen, said yesterday.

Addressing a luncheon meeting of the Second Congressional Republican Women's Club, Garschke said the Estimate Board would provide more representative government if it were composed of both Democrats and Republicans. The president of the Board of Aldermen is a member of the Estimate Board.

About 70 persons attended the luncheon meeting, at 5423 South Grand boulevard.

CHURCH BOARD HERE URGES A-TEST BAR

The Metropolitan Church Federation's executive board has approved a resolution asking the Federal Government to stop the "menace of testing of nuclear weapons," it was announced today.

The "redrafted" resolution, approved March 6, was the result of many months of discussion and controversy in the federation, which represents Protestant denominations and has about 600 member churches. One of the points eliminated in the resolution as finally passed suggested overall disarmament. Added was a proviso restricting a unilateral ceasefire to "above-ground" tests, in line with the suggestion of Arthur H. Compton of Washington University.

"As Christians believing in the sacredness of human life and seeking to promote international justice and good will," the church group said, "we are deeply concerned that a way may be found to end the testing of nuclear weapons by all nations." The resolution stated: "1. Because scientists throughout the world have warned us that there is a grave risk that fallout resulting from nuclear tests endangers health, especially of children, and will increase the number of seriously defective children who will be born in future generations and that the danger will become progressively greater as the testing continues;

"2. Because it is unjust that the people of the world, especially those of nations not engaged in nuclear testing, as well as future generations, should be exposed to this peril without their consent;

"3. Because the continued testing of nuclear weapons in the face of world-wide appeals for cessation of testing intensifies the atmosphere of fear and suspicion between nations and contributes to international ill will and hostility rather than good will;

"4. Because scientists of all nations are agreed that accurate detection of testing is possible and feasible;

"We heartily commend the President of the United States for his announcement that the United States intends to cease nuclear testing for at least a year and urge that our Government do all in its power to persuade the nations to do likewise. We deem it fitting that our Government, which led the way in the development of nuclear weapons, should do all in its power to end the menace of their continued testing. Therefore, we commend all governments which are seeking to arrive at an agreement calling for cessation of testing and setting up detection machinery and urge our Government to do all in its power to see that such negotiations come to a successful conclusion.

"We further urge that, if the nuclear powers fail to reach agreement, the United States should announce its intention to conduct no more above-ground bomb tests."

Glenn L. Moller, an attorney, was chairman of a commission offering the resolution. The National Council of Churches and the World Council of Churches, already have called for an end to testing. Compton, Nobel prize-winning physicist, suggested last December that the church group not seek to bar underground nuclear explosions. He favored proposals made earlier by United States Senator Albert Gore (Dem.) of Tennessee.

INCOMES REACH RECORD; OUTPUT UP 4TH MONTH FOR MRS. DUNCAN

WASHINGTON, March 17—The economy continued to move slowly but steadily upward in February. Government reports revealed yesterday.

For the fourth consecutive month, the Federal Reserve Board's index of industrial production increased by one point in February. This brought the seasonally adjusted index to 144, with 1947-49 at 100. The figure was just one point below the pre-recession level in August 1957, and two points below the record reached in February 1957.

Personal income rose in February by $1,300,000,000 at seasonally adjusted annual rates, to a new record of $364,500,000,000. The rise was almost entirely in wage and salary income plus Social Security payments, which increased in February because of changes in the law enacted last year.

In companion reports, the Federal Housing Administration and Veterans Administration both announced increases in applications or appraisal requests for mortgage insurance and guarantees in February. The increases were largely seasonal, but the figures indicated a far higher level of activity in these programs than last year, despite the recent increase in long-term interest rates. In effect, the two programs have leveled off at a point below their peak of last summer but well above the level of 1957.

The personal income report by the Commerce Department showed an increase of $700,000,000 to a record annual rate of $246,100,000,000 in wage and salary income. Transfer payments, reflecting the increase in Social Security benefits for the aged, rose by $500,000,000 to $26,300,000,000, despite slight further declines in unemployment compensation benefits.

Personal interest income was up slightly and farm income off slightly in the month, the report showed.

WARNS TOXIC WAR COULD WIPE OUT U.S. IN 6 HOURS

CHAPEL HILL, N.C., March 17 (AP)—A former World Health Organization official warned yesterday that no country is capable of protecting its citizens from attack of biological warfare or nuclear weapons.

Dr. Brock Chisholm, former director general of the World Health Organization, a United Nations affiliate, said toxic warfare can be even more deadly than nuclear warfare.

He told delegates to the fourteenth annual Health Education Conference that 40 to 100 per cent of the population of the United States could be destroyed in six hours by a nation that has no army, navy or air force.

It could be done, he said, by a country that had biologists skilled enough to prepare the toxins—poisons.

"Such a country," he added, "could prepare the toxins, get 100 volunteers to bring two pounds each to the United States, and drop this toxin dust on the 100 main population and military centers. The people in these centers would be dead within six hours."

AIRPORT CONCESSIONAIRE SUES TO KEEP GIFT SHOP

Suit to prevent the award of a contract for the gift shop concession at the Airport Terminal Building to the Handley Products Co. of St. Louis was filed in circuit court today by the present concessionaire, Charles M. Shayer and Co. of St. Louis.

The Shayer Co. said the bid it submitted for a three-year contract starting April 1 was the highest bid but that the contract was awarded to the Handley Co. David Leigh, airport manager, said the Shayer bid was 18.11 per cent of gross and the Handley bid 18.30 per cent.

Named as defendants were the Board of Estimate and Apportionment and the St. Louis Airport Commission. Circuit Judge O. P. Owen ordered the defendants to show cause Monday why an injunction should not be issued.

SOVIET-SUDAN TRADE PACT SIGNED, MOSCOW REPORTS

LONDON, March 17 (UPI)—The Moscow radio announced today that a Soviet-Sudan trade agreement was signed in Khartoum yesterday.

The broadcast said the agreement "provides for the mutual grant of most-favored-nation treatment in questions of trade and shipping, and determines the method of settlement and other conditions of trade operations."

It added that Russia will export to the Sudan in 1959 machines and equipment, rolled iron and steel, timber, sugar and other commodities. The Sudan will deliver to the U.S.S.R. cotton, groundnuts, sesame and other usual Sudanese exports.

Hussein on Way to Hawaii. TAIPEI, Formosa, March 17 (UPI)—King Hussein of Jordan left for Hawaii today en route to Washington after an eight-day visit to Nationalist China. In a joint communique, he and President Chiang Kai-shek urged free nations to strengthen their unity against Communism.

HEARING OPENS ON PUNISHMENT FOR MRS. DUNCAN

VENTURA, Calif., March 17 (UPI)—Elizabeth Duncan's past was probed today in a hearing to determine the penalty she must pay for hiring two men to kill her pregnant daughter-in-law. The jury found her guilty yesterday.

One of Mrs. Duncan's 10 or more ex-husbands testified he had married her in May 1957, as a "business proposition" to share in a $196,000 estate.

Leonard J. Solenne, 29-year-old truck driver and hood-carrier from Carpentaria, Calif., said Mrs. Duncan told him the will of her dead husband provided that she must marry again to collect the fortune.

The witness said he agreed to the marriage proposition over a drink in a Santa Barbara bar on terms that he would receive half of the money.

Marriage Annulled. Mrs. Duncan paid his airplane fare to San Francisco and bought the rings for the marriage but he received no money, Solenne said. He said he and the defendant never had lived as man and wife. Their marriage was annulled two months later.

District Attorney Roy Gustafson began the penalty trial with an explanation to the jury of the purpose of the hearing. He called as first witnesses for the prosecution inspector Edward J. Murphy and officer William R. Wilson, two San Francisco police officers.

The two described the defendant's arrest in 1953 for operating a massage parlor which fronted for a house of prostitution.

Mrs. Duncan, then known as Betty Cogbill; her husband, Benjamin Cogbill; and another woman were arrested in the raid. Mrs. Duncan was convicted.

Gas Chamber or Life. The jury, in fixing Mrs. Duncan's penalty, has two alternatives—death in the gas chamber or life imprisonment. Mrs. Duncan still has a plea of not guilty by reason of insanity to be settled before any sentence can take effect.

The 54-year-old defendant, smiling and optimistic when the jury of eight women and four men filed in to announce its verdict yesterday, took the first degree murder conviction calmly at first. She turned to her 30-year-old lawyer son, who sat at the counsel table beside her with his head bowed, and said quietly:

"Don't worry too much, Frank."

It was Frank's pregnant bride, Olga, 30, whose murder she was convicted of plotting. The prosecution charged that Mrs. Duncan, fiercely jealous of her daughter-in-law, offered $5000 to two minor criminals, Augustine Baldonado, 26, and Luis Moya, 20, to get rid of the Canadian-born nurse.

Baldonado and Moya confessed kidnaping Olga from her Santa Barbara apartment last Nov. 17, strangling her and burying the body in a shallow grave beside a country road. They led police to the grave Dec. 21. Each is awaiting trial on a plea of innocent by reason of insanity.

Mrs. Duncan testified that Baldonado and Moya had been blackmailing her and that she had nothing to do with plotting the murder.

COURT PLACES GUTERMA FIRM IN RECEIVERSHIP

NEW YORK, March 17 (AP)—The F. L. Jacobs Co., the firm through which Alexander Guterma controlled his industrial empire, was placed in receivership yesterday.

A few hours earlier, Guterma had been indicted on charges of conspiring to defraud the Government in stock deals and violating federal securities regulations.

A federal grand jury returned a 21-count indictment carrying maximum penalties, on conviction, of 45 years in prison and $210,000 in fines.

The receivership order came from United States District Judge Sidney Sugarmen. He named as receivers former city comptroller Lazarus Joseph and Milton S. Goud, both New York lawyers.

The two had taken part with a former general counsel of the Securities and Exchange Commission, William H. Timbers, in a week-long experiment to avert receivership.

Asked for Receivership.

The three were independent directors on the nine-man Jacobs board, but over the weekend the three directors called for receivership, admitting the breakdown of the experiment.

In a bitter hearing yesterday Hal Roach Jr., who took over controls of Jacobs from Guterma, accused the SEC of influencing the three. SEC regional administrator Paul Windels Jr. called the complaint "contemptible."

In taking control of the firm from Roach, a member of the Hollywood studio family, Sugarmen said he was casting no

AUSTRALIA, RUSSIA AGREE TO RESTORE DIPLOMATIC TIES

BROADBEACH, Australia, March 17 (AP)—Australia and Russia announced an agreement today to resume mutual diplomatic representation. The respective embassies have been idle since a 1954 dispute over a spy case.

Australia's Foreign Secretary Richard G. Casey said he and Soviet Deputy Foreign Minister Nicolai P. Firubin had "two or three business-like and decisive meetings over a glass or two of vodka."

Russia, angry after Australia granted political asylum to Vladimir Petrov, third secretary of the Russian Embassy in Australia, withdrew its Canberra Embassy staff in 1954, and ordered the Australians out of Moscow. Petrov, who has since lived in Australia, confessed that he was a Russian spy.

Casey said at a news conference nothing was mentioned in the talks about the conditions under which the breach of diplomatic relations occurred.

ASSERTS BANK SALE WAS BELOW VALUE

Stock of the Mercantile-Commerce National Bank actually was worth $2,500,000 when it was sold to the Mercantile Trust Co. for $1,843,962 in 1951, an Omaha (Neb.) specialist in buying and selling banks testified yesterday.

The witness was Robert Kunkel, testifying before Circuit Judge O. P. Owen in the suit of Byron Moser and Alex Berger Jr. to void the transaction by which Mercantile Trust, then Mercantile Commerce Bank & Trust Co., reacquired the stock of its affiliate at 3612 Washington boulevard.

Kunkel testified that the $2,500,000 estimate on the affiliate's value was exclusive of intangibles, such as good will, physical location, which he said was excellent, and ratio of time deposits to demand deposits.

The witness estimated the present value of Mercantile-Commerce National Bank at $4,450,000, exclusive of intangibles.

Under cross-examination by counsel for Mercantile Trust, Kunkel acknowledged that he had never participated in sale of a bank as large as Mercantile-Commerce National Bank, his specialty being transactions involving small town banks.

Moser, a banker in St. Louis for 36 years, took the stand yesterday and testified in support of his allegation that the value of the national bank in 1951, including intangibles, was $3,685,583 and that the present value is $5,482,286.

His and Berger's petition, in addition to seeking nullification of the transaction, also asks damages of $3,638,323 from certain officers and stockholders of Mercantile Trust.

Moser testified that prior to 1951 he held three certificates of beneficial interest in the national bank and that after Mercantile Trust exercised its option to reacquire the bank's stock, he bought 10,000 more of these certificates.

He said that in connection with the reacquisition he surrendered all but 721 certificates, retaining them for the purpose of filing suit later.

The certificates of interest had been issued to stockholders of the national bank in 1934 after Mercantile Trust was ordered by the Federal Reserve Board to divest itself of the national bank stock.

On cross-examination Moser testified that in 1944 he headed a group which tried unsuccessfully to get a charter for a bank in the vicinity of Mercantile-Commerce National Bank. Application for the charter was opposed by directors of the national bank.

GREAT LAKES TO CARIBBEAN SHIPPING SUBSIDY AWARDED

WASHINGTON, March 17 (UPI)—The Grace line will begin the first United States-flag service from the Great Lakes to foreign ports this spring when the St. Lawrence Seaway is opened, the Government announced yesterday.

The Maritime Administration awarded the ship line an operating subsidy for voyages between Great Lakes and Caribbean ports.

Under its agreement, Grace line will provide 24 to 34 sailings a year in the open season on the lakes. Its ships will go to Venezuela, The Netherlands, West Indies, and the north coast of Colombia.

UAW SAYS IT LOST 289,411 MEMBERS, $2,373,238 IN '58

DETROIT, March 17 (AP)—The United Auto Workers said yesterday it lost 289,411 dues paying members and went $2,373,238 in the red last year.

Emil Mazey, UAW secretary-treasurer, said the average number of monthly dues payers fell from 1,315,461 in 1957 to 1,026,050 in 1958.

Mazey said the 1958 dues loss resulted in the UAW spending some $225,000 a month more than it took in. The union's annual financial statement said the UAW has $28,000,000 in assets.

SENATE GROUP APPROVES RISE IN TWO FUNDS

WASHINGTON, March 17 (AP)—The Senate Foreign Relations Committee approved today President Eisenhower's request for multi-billion-dollar United States subscriptions to the International Monetary Fund and the World Bank. It did so in a fashion that would wreck Eisenhower budget-balancing hopes.

The committee voted to make the new subscriptions available on July 1, instead of including the charges against the current fiscal year's budget, already billions of dollars out of balance.

The legislation would increase United States subscription to the Monetary Fund by $1,375,000,000 and to the World Bank by $3,175,000,000, but wouldn't mean that much cash out of the Treasury.

The increased subscription to the bank would require no outlay in cash. The additional financing for the fund, however, would be a charge against the budget.

It would call for a gold payment of $344,000,000 to the fund with the balance being provided in non-interest bearing demand notes. The notes would not represent a United States Treasury outlay until such time as the International Fund cashed them. But they are charged against the 1960 budget under the language the committee adopted.

The 1960 budget, covering the 12 months beginning July 1, is the one that Mr. Eisenhower offered delicately balanced on the basis that Government income and outgo would be in the neighborhood of 77 billion dollars.

Mr. Eisenhower's planning contemplated the fund-bank measure would be charged against this fiscal year for which a deficit of around 13 billion dollars appears in prospect.

So it is possible there may have been some political considerations in today's decision by the Democratic-dominated Senate committee.

Another point of conflict on federal financing was voiced yesterday by a Pentagon spokesman who objected to efforts of Congressmen to force more money on the Defense Department than it wants.

Wilfred J. McNeil, assistant secretary of defense, told the National Taxpayers Conference: "We think a 41-billion-dollar military budget is big enough."

McNeil spoke at a meeting arranged by the Tax Foundation Inc., New York, and attended by officers of state taxpayers organizations.

For several years, McNeil said, defense officials have found themselves in "a peculiar situation for bureaucrats"—that of trying to tell Congress they don't need more money. He added: "But apparently the elected representatives again will try to force us to take more."

McNeil decried the attitude of those who "on leaving closed defense hearings stress only the bad news." This apparently referred to leaks from secret sessions of congressional committees at which high military officers testify.

McNeil, who is comptroller of the military establishment, said the department wants to keep the nation's defenses strong on a stable level of spending.

"We also try to think about what is required to keep the country strong economically," he added. "We feel we must use foresight and restraint now if we hope to have a strong economy in 1965 and 1970."

$1.75 HAIRCUTS ON E. SIDE

East St. Louis barbers decided last night to raise the price of haircuts from $1.50 to $1.75 effective Thursday. Local 138 of the Barbers Union voted the increase, making the higher rate effective on week-days throughout the East Side except Belleville.

COUNTERFEITING WAVE WORRYING SECRET SERVICE

WASHINGTON, March 17 (AP)—It's been a banner year for counterfeiters, says the United States secret service. Secret Service Chief U. E. Baughman, in testimony made public by the House Appropriations Committee, said an upsurge in counterfeiting in 1958 has caused his agents serious concern.

Baughman was at a loss to explain the increase in counterfeiting. He didn't attribute it to the recession.

The witness told of the case of a legitimate business man in North Carolina. "Upon receipt of certain information followed by investigation, we went to his store and found over $800,000 in counterfeit money in a refrigerator. This man had no prior record as a counterfeiter. Why that man is in counterfeiting is difficult to answer."

JURY FINDS FORMER DEPUTY NOT GUILTY OF BURGLARY

A jury in the court of Circuit Judge Theodore McMillan has acquitted Walter Davis, former St. Louis county deputy sheriff and jail guard, of a charge of burglary.

Davis was rearrested immediately by county deputy sheriffs in connection with a filling station holdup, but later released for want of prosecution.

An indictment returned last December accused Davis of participating in a burglary at Guarantee Auto Sales, 3925 Easton avenue, where a radio valued at $25 and checks totaling $100 were stolen. Police testified that Davis made an oral admission of the burglary, but Davis, testifying in his own defense, denied the charge.

LABOR DISPUTE TIES UP TRAFFIC ON TURNPIKE

NEW BRUNSWICK, N.J., March 17 (AP)—Toll collectors and maintenance workers walked off their jobs on the New Jersey turnpike today in a labor dispute.

Traffic backed up at exits of the 118-mile superhighway as supervisory and office help tried to cope with the toll-collecting tasks.

The dispute arose in part over whether the turnpike employees had the right to wear union buttons on their uniforms.

John Flesher, superintendent of tolls, said some of the regular toll collectors stayed on the job after the walkout became effective at 7 a.m. The superhighway employees 300 toll collectors and 160 maintenance men.

The toll collectors and maintenance workers are represented by Local 1511 of the State, County and Municipal Employees Union.

BULGARIA DENIES BEING SUBJECT TO WORLD COURT

THE HAGUE, March 17—Bulgaria denied yesterday that it is subject to the jurisdiction of the International Court of Justice in a case rising from the destruction of an El Al Israel airliner.

Bulgarian fighter aircraft shot down the unarmed passenger plane July 26, 1955, taking the lives of 51 passengers and the crew of seven.

Israel has asked the World Court to find Bulgaria responsible and to fix the damages. Before starting the litigation Israel had demanded $2,656,858 from Bulgaria by negotiations.

Israel claimed Bulgaria was subject to the compulsory jurisdiction of the international court because of acceptance by the kingdom of Bulgaria in 1921 of the compulsory jurisdiction of a previous court established by the League of Nations. It was replaced after World War II by the present court.

DU PONT STOCK LOSS PLACED AT NEARLY BILLION

CHICAGO, March 17 (AP)—Individual stockholders of E. I. du Pont de Nemours & Co. testified today they would suffer financially under a government proposal to divest Du Pont of its 23 per cent ownership of General Motors Corp.

Two witnesses called by lawyers for Du Pont testified in United States District Court that they would dispose of part or all of their holdings of Du Pont and General Motors if the government plan is adopted.

Ferdinand A. Christensen, Washington, D.C., testified the government plan "amounts to confiscation by taxation."

Christensen, who owns 400 shares of Du Pont jointly with his wife, estimated he would receive 552 shares of G.M. stock under the distribution proposed by the Government.

IRS Ruling.
The Internal Revenue Service has ruled that G.M. stock so distributed would be treated as ordinary income and subject to tax.

Christensen testified the stock he and his wife would receive would place him in a higher tax bracket and increase his taxes about $950 a year.

Similar testimony was given by Alfred B. Moran, a partner in the Detroit brokerage firm of Watling, Lerchen & Co.

Yesterday, Dr. Benjamin J. Tepping of National Analysts Inc., a Philadelphia research firm, said that the Government plan would cost Du Pont stockholders nearly a billion dollars.

Judge Walter J. Labuy is hearing proposals for divesting Du Pont of its 23 per cent stock interest in General Motors in compliance with a United States Supreme Court order.

The high court has held Du Pont's huge investment in G.M. bears a tendency toward monopoly.

U.S. Proposal.
The Government has proposed that Du Pont distribute 43,000,000 of its 63,000,000 G.M. shares among individual Du Pont shareholders and sell the remaining 20,000,000 shares on the open market over a 10-year period.

The company has offered a counter-proposal which would divest it of voting rights of its G. M. stock, but would allow it to retain title and dividend rights.

Tepping testified he supervised a sample survey of more than 10,000 Du Pont shareholders to determine what tax penalties would result if the Government's stock distribution proposal is adopted.

He said the study indicated 231,183 holders of 25,177,000 shares of Du Pont stock included in the survey would be assessed an additional tax of $77,805,000 annually over the 10-year period, a total of $778,050,000.

WINE BLACK MARKET PLOT PUTS 3 IN PAKISTAN PRISON
KARACHI, March 17 (AP)—A military court today sentenced a leading business man and two of his sons to prison and fined them a total of $560,000 for smuggling in foreign wine and selling it in the black market.

The three men had been rounded up in the Pakistan military government's drive against the corruption which flourished under the previous political regime.

Seth Motam Dass and his elder son, Lakhman Dass, were ordered to prison for two years and each fined the equivalent of $224,000. A younger son, Ghansham Dass, was sentenced to one year and fined $112,000.

WOMAN, 21, FOUND HANGED IN BASEMENT OF HER HOME
Miss Doris Doeber, 21 years old, was found hanged in the basement of her home, 3410 Connecticut street, yesterday.

The body, suspended from a water pipe by a rope, was discovered by her brother, Donald. A box and glass that had contained insecticide was also found.

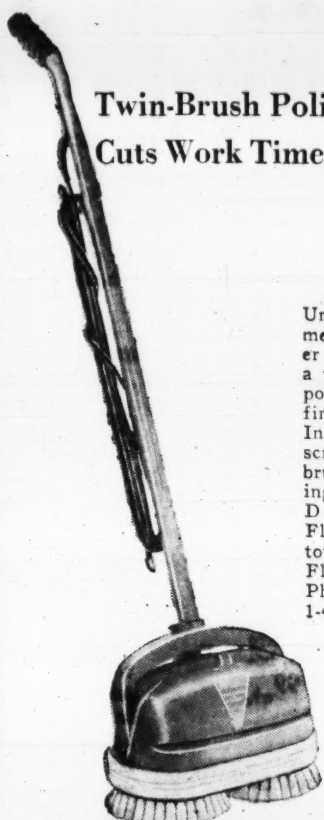

Miss Doeber's mother, Mrs. Leona Doeber, a widow, told police her daughter was despondent because skin blemishes had not responded to treatment.

SHOT, WOUNDED IN DISPUTE
J. W. Moss, stationary engineer at Broadway Hotel, East St. Louis, suffered a flesh wound in the left side of the chest when he was shot by a fellow employee after an altercation in the hotel basement early today, Moss told police.

Officers were seeking the alleged assailant, who fled after the shooting, Moss said. Moss, who lives at 2112 North Fifth street, East St. Louis, was treated at St. Mary's Hospital there and returned to work.

BONN AND BELGRADE FAIL TO HEAL BREAK

© New York Times News Service
BONN, May 17—Six months of secret negotiations aimed at re-establishing diplomatic relations between West Germany and Yugoslavia have broken down.

The negotiations were conducted by the ambassadors of the two countries in Rome. The Yugoslavs' insistence on maintaining full-scale relations with Communist East Germany led the West Germans to end the talks.

It was Yugoslavia's recognition of East Germany in October 1957 that caused a rupture between the two countries. West Germany did not seek a break between Pankow, seat of the East German regime, and Belgrade as the price for restoring relations, but it made clear to the Yugoslavs that a "freeze" and eventual diminution of Pankow-Belgrade relations would be desirable. The Yugoslavs insisted that their relations with East Germany could not be modified. Edward Kardelj, Yugoslav President, said Bonn's policy of withdrawing recognition from any country that establishes relations with East Germany was "unrealistic."

There has been talk recently that Bonn might be willing to raise the level of its contacts with East Germany as part of the settlement of the Berlin crisis. This was evidently what Kardelj had in mind.

Economist Says Eisenhower Curb on Oil Imports Is 'Sordid Politics at Its Worst'

Sumner Slichter Calls Quotas an Act of Aggression Against Free World on Behalf of the Oil States—'National Security' Explanation Angers Allies.

By GEORGE H. HALL

A Washington Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch.

WASHINGTON, March 17.

PRESIDENT EISENHOWER'S imposition of mandatory controls on crude oil imports is "sordid politics at its worst," in the opinion of Sumner H. Slichter, economist and professor at Harvard University.

"The real purpose of the curbs is to stall off legislation sponsored by oil state Senators and Representatives that would have restricted petroleum imports by specific quotas," Slichter wrote in one of a series of analyses he has been preparing for the Japanese economic journal, Nihon Keizai Shimbun.

"The oil quotas," he continued, "are an unwarranted act of economic aggression on behalf of a few oil states against the nation as a whole and against the free world. By no stretch of imagination can these curbs be regarded as promoting the national interest."

National Security Clause.

President Eisenhower took action on oil imports a week ago under the national security clause of the Reciprocal Information Act. This authorizes the Chief Executive, if he finds imports are threatening national security, to "take such action, and for such time, as he deems necessary to adjust imports of such articles and their derivatives so that such imports will not threaten to impair the national security."

The restrictions and basis for them are particularly galling to Canada. It will be recalled that the export of Canadian oil was one of the matters discussed when Mr. Eisenhower made an official visit to Canada last summer. At that time voluntary curbs were in effect.

Canadian Finance Minister Donald Fleming said of the earlier restrictions: "Not only does the United States action in respect of our oil make no sense, as we see it, in relation to their actual security interests, but it also appears to offend against the tenor and purpose of the principles for economic co-operation in defense matters that have been formally agreed in an exchange of views between our two governments."

Reaction to Mandatory Curbs. Canadian reaction to the new mandatory controls was even sharper. Lester B. Pearson, leader of the opposition in the Canadian House of Commons, said the restrictions were "grave" concern to Canada and that the American justification on the ground of national security "added insult to injury."

He referred to the fact Canadian-American defense policies are closely correlated. The United States-Canada Distant Early Warning (DEW) line radar defense network is in Canada.

Prime Minister Diefenbaker, who won a great election victory last year on a Canadian nationalistic platform, made this statement for his Conservative party regime: "The government will seize every opportunity—and I want to make this very clear—for unimpeded access to the United States for Canadian oil. In this or in other ways which may be necessary, our determination is to safeguard the interests of the Canadian oil industry."

Some of Diefenbaker's advisers have taken the position Canada has no alternative but to adopt import controls of its own.

A writer in the Toronto Globe & Mail asked:

CASTRO FAVORS ONE BIG MIDDLE CLASS FOR CUBA

HAVANA, March 17 (AP)—Premier Fidel Castro said last night that all ranks of Cuban society should be leveled into one big middle class.

"We will elevate the poor to the middle class" and reduce the wealthy to the middle class, Castro told a TV audience.

Castro said an analysis of "what other governments of Cuba have stolen" shows an honest regime should be able to build homes for every Cuban family, thousands of schools, hospitals, highways and industries.

Meanwhile, nine persons who had taken haven in Latin American embassies after President Fulgencio Batista's fall left under safe conduct today for exile in South America. Those leaving the Peruvian embassy for Lima included ex-public works minister Ramiro Onate and his wife. Among those leaving the Ecuadorian embassy was former Gen. Martin Diaz Tamayo.

Poland Ousts Belgian. WARSAW, March 17 (AP)—The Polish government yesterday ordered Leonard Storm, an attaché at the Belgian Embassy, to leave the country. Storm said his expulsion was a reprisal for Belgium's recent order expelling a minor employee of the Polish Embassy in Brussels on spy charges.

West German Atomic Protest

KLOPPENBURG (right) took up torches Saturday at Dortmund, West Germany, in protest against arrival of Forty-seventh British Guided Missiles Regiment. Defense Question: Is Suicide Or Surrender the Only Choice?

By MARQUIS W. CHILDS

A Washington Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch.

Copyright, 1959, The Pulitzer Publishing Co.

WASHINGTON, March 17.

THANKS to the Pentagon censor and the inevitable restraints imposed by the Berlin crisis, the current inquiry into the nation's defenses is unlikely to bring into proper focus the real nature of the dispute over preparedness or lack of it.

Put in the simplest possible terms, the question posed is: have conventional forces been so cut back for reasons of economy that the United States' capacity for limited war has been dangerously reduced and this country's entire reliance placed on nuclear retaliation? In other words, is the choice between suicide and surrender?

Gen. Maxwell Taylor, chief of staff of the Army, believes that the defense budget must be 45 billion dollars a year for five years if the Army is to overcome the grave deficiencies of recent years. This is five billion more than is contained in the President's budget for 1960. In Taylor's view it would enable the Army to carry out a minimum modernization.

Some of this he spelled out in his testimony before the Johnson Preparedness subcommittee, but the basic contention he put on the record in a speech last December. He said then that 70 per cent of the equipment of the Army was of World War II or Korean war vintage or older.

Lists Army Needs. The Army needs, he told an audience in Pasadena, Calif., second generation missiles, light atomic weapons, improved conventional weapons, many new types of air and ground vehicles and improved and newly designed electronic communications equipment. It is vital also to plan the contingent use of air and sea lift for limited war. In short, the Army is equipped with the weapons of the last war to fight a new war on the ground. In contrast, the Russians have pushed modernization very far in their 175 ground divisions.

Of the four members of the Joint Chiefs of Staff, Taylor is the only one due to retire after two terms as Chief of Staff. When he retires at the end of June, Taylor intends to take his case to the public. He will argue first in a series of magazine articles and then in a book that "massive retaliation" is a strategic trap into which the United States has fallen. It is a deadly trap from which we must extricate ourselves, he contends.

The odds would seem to be against his success. The power of the aircraft industry is very great and if the Eisenhower economy wall is to be breached, with or without the President's consent, it would seem likely that the additional money would go into missiles or aircraft. How much interest the public is paying to the defense controversy is, in any event, questionable.

Yet Taylor's effort should not be entirely discounted. His predecessor as chief of staff, Gen. Matthew Ridgway, more than any single individual, blocked those who were bent on an atomic strike when the French had dug themselves into the jungle south of Dien Bien Phu in the Indochina war. The country's debt to him on this one score alone is great.

Ridgway also made the case for a modernized army of reasonable strength. While he was not reappointed to a second term as Chief of Staff, he had a wide and respectful hearing. Before he retired, Taylor will go to Europe for a lengthy meeting of the military planners of the North Atlantic Treaty Organization. About mid-May he will be in Berlin. Ostensibly this will be for a formal farewell to the American troops stationed there.

In fact, it will be a morale booster for the American garrison. From 1949 to 1951 Taylor was in command of the United States contingent in Berlin and he has a deep attachment to the city. When this spare, handsome soldier inspects the troops in battle formation with the deadline of May 27 only a few days away, it will be a moment of high emotion.

What is coming out of the current preparedness hearings should leave Moscow in no doubt—this country will not retreat from Berlin no matter how grim the choice. But a choice between suicide and a border province in Iran or the China offshore islands could be something quite different. It is the case for readiness to meet the limited challenge that Gen. Taylor will try to carry to the court of public opinion.

RESTON—Eisenhower, Macmillan to Try To Resolve German Issues

Most Differences Are Matters of Degree or Approach—Little Spectacular Expected From Meeting.

By JAMES RESTON

WASHINGTON, March 17.

WHEN PRESIDENT EISENHOWER and Prime Minister Macmillan of Britain meet here late this week they will try to resolve several differences that have arisen between the State Department and the Foreign Office on the German question.

Among these are the following:

Summit Meeting. In his TV address to the nation last night, President Eisenhower indicated his willingness to attend a summit meeting with Prime Minister Nikita Khrushchev of the Soviet Union, provided the preliminaries to such a meeting "offer prospects of worthwhile results."

Prime Minister Macmillan, however, came back from Moscow with the distinct impression, which he conveyed to the President before last night's broadcast, that "worthwhile results" can be achieved with the Soviet Union only when Khrushchev himself is the Soviet negotiator.

Macmillan is understood to have told the President that Khrushchev agreed to a foreign ministers meeting in the most contemptuous terms. The Soviet leader remarked to the Prime Minister that the Western powers could call a foreign ministers meeting if it amused them, but warned in advance that he regarded foreign ministers as mere functionaries without power.

The East Germans? Here again there is a slight difference of approach between London and Washington. The United States has indicated that it might be willing to deal with the East German officials at the checkpoints to Berlin as "agents" of the Soviet Union, but not as "principals" of a sovereign state.

The British agree with this to a degree but only to a degree. They do not want to make any big issue out of what the East Germans call themselves. They intend merely to say the British government will regard the East Germans as "agents" and let the East Germans regard themselves as "principals" if it makes them feel better.

Eastern Europe: The United States Government believes that it should make clear to the Russians in any future meeting, as it did at the last summit meeting in Geneva, that it is not prepared to acquiesce in the Soviet conquest of eastern Europe.

The British do not think it does any good to keep claiming this, since Washington

Single Fixed Plan.

It is stressed here that all these are primarily differences of degree, attitude and approach rather than differences of any fixed plans. In fact, so far as one can discover, there is only one fixed plan, held by both sides: This is to defend Western rights in Berlin in such a way as to preserve the peace and keep the alliance together.

The word here, both in the State Department and the Western embassies, is that it would be unwise to expect anything spectacular out of this week's meeting.

Officials are convinced that no question can be settled by itself, but that the Berlin question, for example, must be discussed as part of a wider settlement including European security, weapons testing, and measures against surprise attack.

It is interesting that the un-

Letters from the People

Pay-As-We-Go

Speaker Rayburn, warning against "balancing the budget at the cost of national defense" asks, "What good are a sound economy and a balanced budget if we lose our national lives and Russian rubles become the coin of the land?" Fair question!

He then asserts—"Future generations would prefer to be saddled with a big national debt incurred for defense than to become slaves to the Communists." Let us hope they would! But does that license us to shift the burden of austerity to generations unborn?

Communists are implacably at war with the West. Two generations hence they will still be at it unless, meanwhile, one side or the other can't stand the pace. Can we go on, year after year, piling up a national debt which can only be paid off by victimizing the bondholders, i.e. by disastrous inflation?

Shouldn't we instead revise our whole crazy-quilt tax structure, budget for six-year periods, tax hard but cut out double taxation and the uncertainties which demoralize business? In short, paying as we go, settle down to a long, deliberate test of will and character!

Democrats may win an election by coddling. But they will never lead us out of the wilderness by borrowing to pay for military security plus subsidized housing and all the other delicacies—non-essentials consumed by the living and paid for by posterity.

Mr. Sam, may you succeed in overcoming the national smugness to the point of providing a sensible margin of safety in defense! But without pretending that the richest country cannot afford to defend itself. Edward Caffery

Before Merger

Before the city takes over the county, there is one thing that the city will have to do, and that is to get rid of the Mayor, and all ward bosses, and replace them with a city manager.

The people of St. Louis county will never accept merger without manager. My advice is that before the people are asked to vote for this merger the city had better clean house. F. E. Richard

Questions for the Red Cross

Far be it from me to be critical of any persons or organizations if they are sincere in their interest for the people they serve. The question I wish answered concerns the Red Cross organization.

A friend of mine reports that during the latest tornado an acquaintance's home was extensively damaged. The people who worked with him collected over $100 for him and in order not to embarrass him asked the Red Cross to present the money to him and not to inform him where the money came from.

Well, they presented him with $50 and told him who donated the money. When asked where the rest of the money was, the inquirer was informed that the balance went for "expenses."

At this time $20,000,000 of the $40,000,000 they are asking for now will go for expenses.

One other thing. My parents and their neighbors gathered lots of clothing for people who suffered from effects of the recent tornado.

When my father presented the boxes of clothing to the Red Cross he was informed that the Red Cross would not accept them, all they could use was cash. The Salvation Army was most happy to receive the clothing.

The A.B.A. Is Right

Current denunciation of the American Bar Association seems to be part of an all-too-familiar pattern. Any person or organization that tries to flush out the Communists and focus attention on Communist subversion is promptly given the smear treatment.

Let's not be lulled into complacency by cagey Communist con men. T.M.G.

Goodby in Creve Coeur

The present dispute over the consolidation of the Creve Coeur Post Office as a branch of the St. Louis office brings to mind some interesting sidelights on the postal service of this early county community.

More than a century ago when a "crossroads store" post office was the hope of every aspiring settler, Creve Coeur attained distinction as the first office established on the Olive street road.

Except for a few months in 1865 it has been in continuous operation since its establishment April 16, 1851. The first two postmasters were prominent citizens, Washington Ross and Thomas Emerson, whose names are perpetuated in Creve Coeur's Ross avenue and Emerson road.

St. Louis county post offices which numbered more than 75 at the turn of the century have dwindled to less than 25 and suburbia's inexorable growth seems about to swallow up another county institution. Ward S. Parker

What the President Omitted

In his address to the nation Monday night, President Eisenhower painted a hopeful picture of our defenses and of the prospect for negotiation on Germany. He sought to assure the country that our military posture is considered effective and adequate by expert opinion. His cautious willingness to attend a summit conference this summer if the foreign ministers first pave the way was welcome. But on both counts he failed to come to grips with the basic realities which lie at the root of public uneasiness.

As to defense, it is not enough to list the 17 types of missiles now in use, the 11 that will come into operation this year, and the 13 that are being developed for the future. The great and conspicuous omission from the President's address was any mention whatever of Soviet achievements in this field. And yet it is the Soviet lead in missiles, the prospect of a dangerous and widening gap between our capacity and theirs, which creates the whole problem.

Thoughtful citizens will not be impressed by the President's repeated contention that the best military minds including his own think everything is in fine shape. For there has been too much evidence that some very able military and civilian minds, especially those uncommitted to sustaining an Administration position, think the contrary. The national safety demands continued subjection of his defense program to unrelenting critical examination by Congress. It demands congressional action to improve and accelerate the program in areas of need exposed by that examination.

As to Berlin, there can be no quarrel with the President's firm rejection of any abandonment of our rights, and his determination to avoid war while standing firm in defense of those rights. The emphasis he gave to the forthcoming negotiations, his promise to consider all proposals which protect the interests of the peoples concerned, and his renewed pledge that the West will not be the first to breach the peace—these were statesmanlike declarations, buttressed by the most positive expression he has yet made in favor of negotiation at the summit.

What was missing was any reference to the hard European realities which have brought the German problem to a state of crisis. It is a distressing oversimplification to attribute the whole affair to a mean proclivity of the Russians for making trouble. They have that talent, true enough. But the problem encompasses Western aspirations as well as theirs.

The West has been pursuing a policy of trying to make a rearmament Germany a member of the Western military alliance. We are planning to base nuclear weapons on German soil. We have been insisting on the reunification of Germany on terms which would be to our advantage and would jeopardize the Russians' security position in central Europe.

Not until there is some disposition on the Western side to modify these aims in exchange for concessions by Moscow can there be much real hope of meaningful negotiation. The President can be excused for not wishing to tip his hand. But some faint indication of a readiness to examine specific alternatives to our own policy would have strengthened his case immeasurably.

It would have been possible, for instance, to exhibit at least an open mind toward some form of military thinning out in central Europe as part of a general security arrangement. With respect to Berlin, it would have been possible to make clear that while we intend to insist on free access to the city, we do not intend to go to war to prevent East Germans from stamping the transit papers that are now stamped by Russians. An offer to submit our case to the United Nations, or to bring the U.N. into the situation in some other way, would have lifted hopes around the world.

Nevertheless the President did in a general way put the emphasis where it belongs—upon talking out the crisis instead of fighting it out. Let us hope that this broad objective will be translated, in the course of preparatory talks with Prime Minister Macmillan and other allies, into a detailed re-examination of the policy conflicts that underlie the crisis.

Missouri Looks at Rights

Missouri is justly proud of its short four-year advance from school segregation to school integration, but racism and prejudice still write a large record across the state. The House Committee on Governmental Organization will learn about this in a Tuesday night hearing on whether to extend the life of the Missouri Commission on Human Rights.

This commission was created in 1957 after long pleading by Gov. Blair, but it was not created in the way he sought. It was not a fair employment practices commission. It had no enforcement powers. In fact, it did not even have authority to hold public hearings, much less to subpoena witnesses.

Yet in its short lifetime the 11-member commission, led by the Rev. Trafford P. Maher of St. Louis University, has found much work to do. Even in the field of education, the commission reports, Missouri still has segregated schools. In employment, equal job opportunities are not given to racial minorities and union membership is sometimes denied them. In housing, ghetto practices still hold without the support of law. In recreation, outright segregation is widely practiced.

Making a dent in these undemocratic and, the commission says, unmoral practices is a large order. As a bare minimum for proceeding with its work, the commission seeks passage of House bills to extend its life and budget. Otherwise the commission will expire in mid-1961, and its task will not be effectively begun.

But a Legislature dedicated to the proposition that all Missourians are free and equal under law and should be treated that way would also seriously consider three other House measures:

Bill 123 would prohibit discrimination in state employment.

Bill 502 would authorize cities of 350,000 to 600,000 population to prohibit discrimination in public places (St. Louis has this authority).

Bill 273, the most important of all, would turn the present Human Rights Commission into a smaller State Commission Against Discrimination, with full authority to investigate employment complaints, to attempt conciliation and to issue cease and desist orders when necessary. The experience of other states with similar statutes proves that conciliation alone can break down the ramparts of prejudice, but conciliation needs the force of law to be effective.

These modest but practical measures against discrimination would bring Missouri closer to its ideal of a state profoundly attached to individual rights.

Help for Bi-State

The St. Louis County Chamber of Commerce has begun some welcome missionary work in behalf of giving the Bi-State Development Agency the legal powers it needs to function. "Let's activate this sleeping giant and get going," is the theme of a report by Chamber President Girard C. Varnum.

The reference is to a bill passed by the Missouri Senate and pending in the House that would give the agency the powers it must have.

It is too bad the county chamber's report was not published a year ago when two county representatives, Republicans Samuel B. Murphy of Kirkwood and Robert W. Copeland of Webster Groves, were knifing efforts to make Bi-State whole. The St. Louis parking-lobby stood on the sidelines and cheered while the public interest was cut to pieces.

Mr. Murphy led the successful attack with a series of wild and fantastic charges about "super government" that the Chamber now has taken pains to answer. As Mr. Varnum says, Bi-State "not only does not have power to tax but cannot take property for projects without consent of local governments." What is so "super" about that?

The Illinois Legislature passed a Bi-State bill in 1953, largely at the urging of the same East Side interests which now are promoting a Tri-City Port District to develop the Chain of Rocks canal area. They have turned to the port authority concept because of repeated failures of the Missouri Legislature—in 1953, 1955, 1957 and 1958—to pass a Bi-State bill identical with the Illinois measure.

There is no fundamental conflict between Bi-State's intended province and that of the Tri-City Port District. If the Missouri Legislature will now do what it ought to have done six years ago, Bi-State will be able to play its important and long-delayed part in the large-scale development of the Missouri-Illinois metropolitan area.

Teamsters Just Hate Rackets

Teamster Union officials, whose eleemosynary instincts are talked about wherever men of good-will gather, have uncovered a pretty nasty situation in the Girl Scout cookie racket in San Francisco. The McClellan committee might want to take a look at it. It seems the San Francisco Girl Scouts are buying some of their cookies from a bakery in Tulsa instead of sticking to bona fide San Francisco cookies which have been properly hauled by Bakery Drivers Local 484.

The Teamster officials in S.F. have not dumped any of the illicit cookies in San Francisco Bay, or beaten up any Girl Scouts. Some people might do things like that—longshoremen, maybe—but we have it on no less authoritative a word than that of H. J. Gibbons that no Teamster official would stoop to strong arm tactics, not even the ones with the longest police records.

Local 484 officials have instead, with simple dignity, and like the little gentlemen they are, withheld their $4000 contribution to the united charities of San Francisco, of which the Girl Scouts are a part. There's moderation for you! There's well-mannered protest! But we hope these labor statesmen are not going to disband their fine efforts before looking into the Boy Scout pot-holder racket. There are ugly rumors afloat that some of that thread doesn't even come from anywhere in California.

When Others Sat Silent

The scene is the Senate in Washington, the year 1930. Under consideration is President Hoover's appointment of Charles Evans Hughes to be Chief Justice of the United States. Many leading Republicans are opposed to the choice. Senior Senator Borah of Idaho has just delivered a slashing attack. Fellow Republicans Blaine of Wisconsin, Brookhart of Iowa, Frazier and Nye of North Dakota, Couzens of Michigan, Johnson of California, Norbeck of South Dakota, among others, are against confirmation.

One hour of denunciation follows another. Is no Republican going to speak up for Mr. Hughes? Finally a defender does arise. He is freshman Senator Otis F. Glenn of Illinois, newly come to the seat that stayed empty for two years after the Senate refused to seat slush fund candidate Frank L. Smith of Illinois's notorious 1926 "Golden Primary." Mr. Glenn tells Mr. Hughes's critics that their arguments would have barred Lincoln from the Supreme Court. The new Senator reminds them that union leaders called Mr. Hughes "the greatest friend of labor laws" ever to sit in the Governor's chair at Albany. He cites the Hughes insurance investigation as a historic public service. When the vote is taken the Senate lines up 59 to 33 for the confirmation of Charles Evans Hughes.

Senator Glenn served four years and then was defeated in the Roosevelt landslide of 1932. He never again held elective office. His death at the age of 79 at Manistee, Mich., the other day, received but modest notice. Yet on that day in February, 1930, he stood up as a newcomer in Congress to defend a great Chief Justice of the United States. The country owes him grateful remembrance for his courage.

Trophies for Cleanliness

While cleanliness is not the first virtue, it is an important one. We commend Philadelphia and Detroit for having spruced themselves up so much as to tie for first place in the national cleanliness city contest for 1958. Belleville, Ill., rated highest in its population group and all who know Belleville first-hand will not be surprised. People in Belleville just do not throw trash on the sidewalks and streets and they keep yards and lots and alleys picked up. St. Louis still has a long way to go to be known nationally for cleanliness. Yet there are areas, particularly South Side neighborhoods with German backgrounds, that are neat as a pin. Since the formation of Downtown, Inc., the central business district is much improved, although still falling short of perfection. If we could clean up our air over deeply entrenched opposition, we surely can clean up our ground.

"FANTASTIC! THINK OF THE MONEY WE'LL SAVE ON CONVENTIONAL ARMS!"

Oh, and They Sure Love the World of Sport

The Irish Have Reveled in the Great Games and Athletic Skills

Carl Wittke, Historian, in "The Irish in America" (Louisiana University Press)

The Irish are fond of sports, from fishing to horse racing to baseball, and they have excelled in all its branches. When their efforts to introduce such native games as hurling and Gaelic football failed in the United States they took what they found in their new home and made it their own.

As early as 1833, the New York Irish organized the East River Fishing Club, and the next year, held a "Jackson fishing party" with a "celebrated Irish pipe" to provide the entertainment.

Hurling, a major Irish game, is somewhat like field hockey, except that the players catch the ball on the side of their stick, balance it, and run with it down the playing field. Under no conditions may a player use his hands, either to pick up the ball from the ground, hurl it or run with it.

The ball is of rubber, about 10 inches in circumference, and weighs about four ounces. The stick is about three feet long, with a four-inch blade at the widest point. As in hockey, a goal tender stands guard at the goal post. The strenuous game requires tremendous stamina. Irishmen love it; to any outsider, the game appears to be plain carnage.

On St. Patrick's day, 1858, there was a hurling match in Hoboken, behind the Elysian Fields, with 12 men on a side, played nearly two hours without registering a goal. After a 20-minute respite, they went at it again and played two and one-half hours without a score. The Irish News described the game as one for heroes only!

Gaelic football is something like soccer. The ball may be dribbled, kicked along the ground or in the air or punched with the fist. Because punching with the fist is an approved method of propelling the ball, the game is frequently marked with gory incidents.

Sullivan and the Other Immortals

The preponderance of Irish in the many art of self-defense has been great. In 1842 an Irish prize fight in Westchester county went 120 rounds. When Jim Lavery lost a $500 purse to Barney Ford in Rhode Island in 1856 because of a foul, the crowd divided into two groups, pulled out knives and prolonged the argument in a free-for-all fight. "Gentleman Jim" Corbett, one of 10 children of an Irish livery-stable owner in San Francisco, attracted national attention with his bout with Jake Kilrain, and went on to become the world's heavyweight champion. In 1891 he fought 61 rounds with the Negro, Peter Jackson.

However long the list of Irish pugilists, the name of the immortal John L. Sullivan leads all the rest. In his first fight in Boston, when he was 19, Sullivan knocked his opponent into the orchestra pit with the first blow. In 1889 "The Boston Strong Boy" fought Jake Kilrain 75 pounds with bare knuckles and became the idol of the Irish. Although the Irish have been neither as interested nor as successful in wrestling as in boxing, William Muldoon deserves mention. Son of Patrick Muldoon and Maria Donohue, he worked as a "bouncer," laborer, longshoreman and cab driver on New York's East side. As a policeman, he won national fame in wrestling and on one occasion wrestled Clarence Whistler for eight hours. Later "The Iron Duke" opened a health center for tired business men. There he put the Wall Street tycoons through their paces, kept them on strict diet, forbade alcoholic drinks and invented "the medicine ball."

Daniel O'Leary, immigrant from County Cork, laid claim to the world championship among walkers. In 1874 he walked 100 miles in 23 hours and 17 minutes; the next year he covered 500 miles in three hours less than six days. In 1879 O'Leary was matched with the Englishman Charles Bowell and walked night and day for six days in Gilmore's Garden in New York to win the championship belt. In his '80s, he still could do six miles an hour.

The reputation of Irish baseball players was so great that others frequently took Irish names to help them in the careers. Leopold Christopher Hoernschmeyer of Cincinnati, for example, played in the National League as Lee Magee. This tendency existed among the young Italian pugilists of Boston's North End who, without a drop of Irish blood, fought under such names as Mickey Landis and Little Jack Dempsey.

When Michael J. Kelly ("King Kelly") was sold by Chicago to Boston in 1887, he was known as the "Ten Thousand Dollar Beauty," but his real claim to baseball immortality rests upon his feats as a base runner, celebrated in the popular song, "Slide, Kelly, Slide." John Joseph ("Muggsy") McGraw was the eldest of an Irish family of nine, "The Little Napoleon," a rough disciplinarian and a real master of the game, won 10 pennants.

The list of big-league managers contains such familiar Irish names as Pat Moran, Hugh Jennings, Joe McCarthy, Connie Mack, Joe Cronin, Steve O'Neill and many others. In Baseball's Hall of Fame in Cooperstown, N.Y., there are plaques for George ("Mickey") Cochrane, one of the game's greatest catchers; "Iron Man" Joseph McGinnity, the pitcher; James H. O'Rourke ("Orator Jim"), one of baseball's early heroes, who played behind the plate and in the outfield, in 21 major league seasons until he was past 50; Hugh Duffy, brilliant outfielder who batted 438 in 1894; Cornelius McGillicuddy, great catcher, and Roger Patrick Bresnahan, "the Duke of Tralee," battery mate of Christy Mathewson.

America has had several Irish baseball clans, but there is none to surpass the Delahanty tribe of Cleveland. The six sons born to James Delahanty and Bridget Croke, Irish immigrants, all left their mark in the annals of the national game. Five of the boys played in the major leagues; the sixth might have done so, and already had been drafted by Brooklyn when he was hit by a pitched ball which ended his career.

Big Ed Delahanty, the eldest, once hit four home runs in one game, and was the only player who won the batting championship in both the National and American Leagues. He batted .408 for Philadelphia in 1889 and .376 for Washington in 1902.

With the Irishman's great love for sports, it is not surprising that many sports writers have been of Irish origin. Thomas Aloysius Dorgan, son of Irish immigrants in the San Francisco tenements, began working for the San Francisco Bulletin at the age of 14. He became a cartoonist for William Randolph Hearst, an authority on boxing, and a highly respected referee. From 1900 to 1920, he reported all major prize fights.

As a cartoonist, "Tad" developed several comic strips, including "In-door Sports," and is credited with having invented such popular sayings as "Yes, we have no bananas," "dumb Dora," "drugstore cowboy," "apple sauce," "cake eater," "the cat's meow," "nickel nurse," "nobody home," "the first hundred years are the hardest," "for cryin' out loud," "you tell 'em," and "busy as a one-armed paper hanger with the hives."

Between Book Ends Tragedy of Unbelief

"I AM ANASTASIA," AUTOBIOGRAPHY OF GRAND-DUCHESS OF RUSSIA. Translated by Oliver Coburn. (Harcourt Brace, 282 pp., $4.75.)

A woman, whom half the world believes to be Anastasia, youngest daughter of Nicholas II, late Czar of Russia, is living today in the Black Forest. This is her autobiography—complete and fully documented. No fiction, no fantasy, no could-bring-to-the-reader more tragedy, pathos, suffering, and sheer, stubborn persistence of the human spirit.

Anastasia was a rescued by a peasant soldier called in to help clear the cellar at Ekaterinburg. She survives a gruelling journey that ends months later on the Romanian border. Her protector is killed and Anastasia, sick in mind and body, throws herself into a canal. She spends months in an asylum and tries desperately to make contacts to establish her identity.

Many friends espouse her cause for a time. But, one by one, they leave her as hopes of obtaining her status and the money she is heirless to as the Czar's daughter fade.

In 1928 she visited the United States at the invitation of a royal cousin who believed in her. But her ill-fate followed her and she returned to Germany in 1931.

The one happiness in Anastasia's life seems to be in recalling memories of her family life at the court of St. Petersburg. Today she is indeed a woman nameless and suffering in an unfriendly world. All in all, this is a strange tale told with a disarming sincerity that grips as it endeavors to convince the reader.

WHO'S RUNNING THIS EXPEDITION? by Ruth Baus. (Coward-McCann, 256 pp., $4.)

Sufferers from an overdose of winter and its blustery aftermath can find early relief by escaping with author Ruth Baus on her expedition to the jungles of Nicaragua, where the Coco river flows undisturbed, orchids bloom, bananas and coconuts flourish and brilliantly colored birds utter strange cries.

Accompanied by an elderly, somewhat cantankerous gentleman (it's strictly platonic) whose hobby is tropical exploration, Mrs. Baus sets off from Managua by bus and muleback for the headwaters of the Coco with high hopes of producing the first motion picture of the wild region.

On arriving at the swirling stream, arrangements are made for a guide and dugout canoe for the four-week journey downriver. Things are a bit difficult at first, what with camping on rough beaches and eating mostly beans and rice, but the picture brightens considerably when the expedition takes on an unusually capable guide. From then on, the trip becomes a delight, a golden journey through a tropical paradise.

At river's end, Mrs. Baus has her film and the crochety old gentleman another happy memory of a river explored. Eloise Lang

DORIS FLEESON

Senators Rarely See Nixon

WASHINGTON. THE UNITED STATES SENATE sees little these days of its nominal presiding officer, Vice President Richard M. Nixon. The Republican minority of 34 has very little more contact with him than the Senate itself.

The Vice President keeps busy cultivating the state party organizations which he hopes will nominate him for President in 1960. When he is not doing that, he concentrates on improving his position as a national figure, especially in the field of foreign policy. With his new job as head of the President's committee on the problems of inflation, he may emerge somewhat later as the principal Administration spokesman in opposition to the Democratic theory which is the present responsibility of Senator Paul Douglas of Illinois. Douglas will speak as chairman of the Joint Economic Committee of the Congress.

Nixon

The Vice President also has plans for travel abroad when the times are more propitious. In this area, however, he may propose but the President will dispose.

Not Missed by G.O.P.

So far as the work of the Senate is concerned, the Vice President is little missed. The chance for that vital vote he can cast in case of a tie will rarely appear in the present session with its 64-Democratic majority.

Republican Senators take a detached view of the Vice President's preoccupation with his personal ambitions. They say he can't help them, and many admit they can't do much for him. This is particularly true of the 11 Republicans who are up for re-election next year.

This unhappy few is beset in many ways. Six are from the West and Midwest, where the Democrats have been making their most spectacular gains.

They are resigned to the fact that one cause of this—Agriculture

Secretary Ezra Taft Benson—will still be around in the next campaign.

The six: Senators Thomas E. Martin of Iowa, Carl T. Curtis of Nebraska, Karl E. Mundt of South Dakota, Andrew F. Schoepel of Kansas, Gordon Allott of Colorado and Henry C. Dworshak of Idaho.

The three New Englanders—Senators Styles Bridges of New Hampshire, Margaret Chase Smith of Maine and Leverett Saltonstall of Massachusetts—have unhappy visions of a Democratic ticket with Senator John F. Kennedy of Massachusetts in first or second place, acting as a magnet for voters of that region.

Always a Lone Wolf.

Two liberals—Senator Clifford Case of New Jersey and John Sherman Cooper of Kentucky—complete the group. They are anti-Nixon in spirit and unquestionably would prefer to run on a ticket headed by Gov. Nelson Rockefeller of New York.

Whatever their ideology, Republicans in Congress are saying with increasing boldness that President Eisenhower is no longer an issue politically. They do not believe they can be hurt or helped by the once magic name.

Another factor which has the effect of diminishing the Vice President's Senate role is the aggressive and expansionist manner in which the new G.O.P. leader, Senator Everett M. Dirksen, has taken hold.

Like his opposite number, Dirksen is taking full advantage of his perquisites and prerogatives, including lavish office space. Having no other visible expectations, the Illinoisan clearly intends to be a Senate man in the fullest sense of the word.

There is no question of hurt feelings or fresh chill in the Nixon-Senate situation. He has always been regarded as a lone wolf by his G.O.P. colleagues—co-operative politically but without personal warmth.

Washington Officials, Diplomats At Jazz-and-Beer Concert

WASHINGTON, March 17 (AP)—Some of Washington's top social figures attended a new kind of benefit last night—a jazz concert complete with smoke-laden atmosphere and pitchers of beer on the table.

They listened with some curiosity and some delight to the "Washington Jazz Jubilee," billed as a history of jazz from Congo Square (New Orleans) to Carnegie Hall (New York), and featuring some of the jazz world's best practitioners.

The benefit for a Washington settlement house was attended by nearly 1500. The congressional delegation included Senator and Mrs. Stuart Symington of Missouri, Senator Ernest Gruening of Alaska, Senator Clair Engle of California and many House members.

The Ambassadors of France and Great Britain were there as well as those from Peru, Nicaragua and other countries. Mrs. Perle Mesta led a delegation.

Several high administration officials had been scheduled to attend, among them Postmaster General Arthur Summerfield and Secretary of Defense Neil McElroy, but jubilee officials explained that with President Eisenhower making a major speech on the Berlin crisis, it was felt it would be unsuitable for members of his Nancy McElroy and a group of her friends took over her father's table.

Bottles of champagne went to winners of number drawings at each table. Most of the audience stuck to the beer which was provided free and by the pitcherful.

To the musicians, it was just another crowd, perhaps a bit bigger and more talkative than most. One player estimated the audience at "about 25 percent squares, and they keep talking, and the rest are interested in the music."

Mrs. Dwight D. Eisenhower and Mrs. Richard Nixon were on the list of patrons for the $10-a-head benefit, but did not attend.

The jazz program—a black tie, evening dress occasion—was the brain child of Mrs. Richard Bolling, wife of the Democratic Representative from Missouri.

FOUNDATION TO HELP EX-CONVICTS SET UP BY HUMANE SOCIETY

Father Dismas Clark to Head Home to Be Used for Rehabilitation.

The Father Dismas Clark Foundation, which will aid in rehabilitation of persons convicted of crimes, was established in articles of incorporation filed today with the Secretary of State at Jefferson City.

The main purpose of the foundation will be to own or lease a rehabilitation home to be known as "Dismas House."

Former convicts would be provided with food, clothing, employment opportunities and spiritual guidance at the home.

Incorporators are the Rev. Charles Dismas Clark S.J., known as the "hoodlum priest" because of his work with convicts, the Rev. Joseph P. Fisher S.J., head of the Missouri Province of the Jesuit Order; Judge David W. FitzGibbon of the Court of Criminal Correction, and Irl B. Baris, St. Louis attorney.

Purposes of the organization would include "aid in rehabilitation and adjustment in the lives of all persons who have transgressed and been convicted of crimes" and the providing of "a haven for the down-trodden and other victims of misfortune, regardless of race, creed, color, religion, national origin or ancestry."

The foundation is empowered "to receive contributions, to expend money and to enter into and perform contracts of every kind for any lawful purpose incident to the furtherance of the objectives" outlined in the charter.

The charter was granted under the "General Not For Profit Corporation Act" of Missouri.

Baris said he will apply to the Internal Revenue Service at Washington for tax exemption for contributions to the foundation. A fund-raising drive will follow.

Persons backing the foundation already are looking over prospective sites for the home, which has long been a project envisioned by Father Clark.

Father Clark, who adopted his middle name after that of the penitent thief who died on the cross beside Christ, will be executive director of the foundation. The other three incorporators will serve on the Board of Directors.

Actor Henry Silva Wed. HOLLYWOOD, March 17 (AP)—A red-haired Irish beauty named Cynthia Conroy could not wait until St. Patrick's day to marry actor Henry Silva. Dublin-born Miss Conroy and Silva had planned to be married today. Yesterday Miss Conroy, who was Miss Canada in last year's Miss Universe contest, and Silva showed up in superior court and were married.

Bar on Corporation Practice of Veterinary Medicine Opposed.

The Missouri Senate was urged today by the Humane Society of Missouri to defeat a pending bill which would make it a misdemeanor for a corporation to practice veterinary medicine.

In telegrams to all members of the Senate, Humane Society officers contended "that the bill was aimed 'directly and solely' at the Humane Society of Missouri."

The society charged that the bill "can have only the effect of depriving annually thousands of animal of adequate and humane veterinary care which has been available at the Humane Society shelter."

"This section (prohibiting the corporate practice of veterinary medicine) can have no possible application to any other part of Missouri than the telegrams stated. 'Its effect would be to penalize thousands to benefit possibly a handful of privately practicing veterinarians.'"

The telegrams noted the Humane Society, a non-profit corporation, received no notice of the bill's introduction by Senator George A. Spencer (Dem.), Columbia. Society officers said they learned of it only by chance last Saturday.

All animals are treated by the society regardless of the ability of the owner to pay for the service. If the owner is able to pay, it is suggested that he make a contribution to the society in whatever amount he pleases.

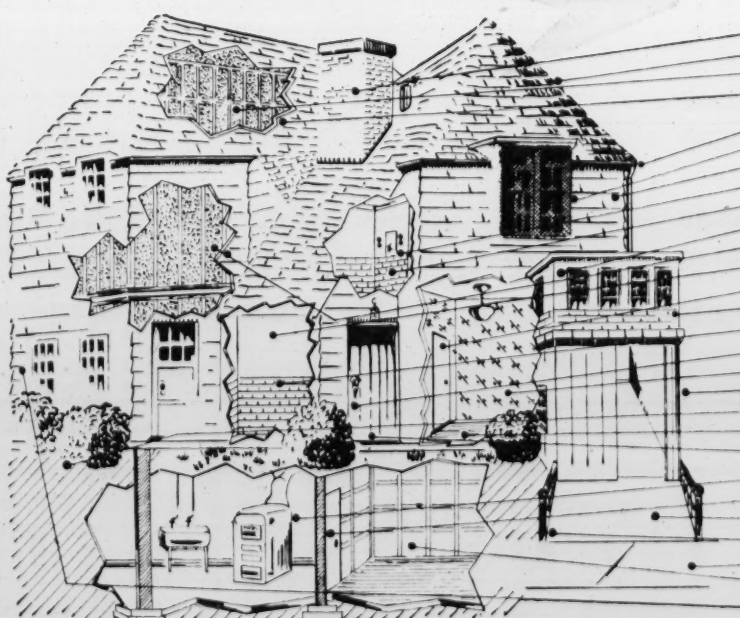

A suit by 21 veterinarians for an injunction to halt operation of the society's clinic and for forfeiture of its charter is pending in circuit court here before Judge Theodore McMillan.

The telegrams to the Senators were signed by Edwin B. Meissner Jr., chairman of the board; R. Forster Buckley, vice chairman and counsel, and Fritz K. Grolock, president and managing director.

U.S. WON'T BAR ATTENDANCE AT VIENNA FESTIVAL

WASHINGTON, March 17 (AP)—A State Department official said yesterday the Government is not encouraging American students to go to the forthcoming Communist-run youth festival in Vienna, but does not plan to object to individuals who do go.
"It's up to their own judgment," as to whether to attend the festival, the informant said. Some American students went to a similar festival in Moscow two years ago. At that time, the State Department official said, some of the students acted to the credit of the United States and some did not. In this case, he said, "we would have no objections" to attendance by well-qualified students who would reflect credit on their country. However, he said, the department has consistently taken a position against United States student organizations participating in the Vienna gathering and his tried to make it plain to these groups that the festival is Communist-dominated. The United States organizations concurred and none of them are taking part, he said.

PURSE-SNATCHER CAUGHT; SHOT FIRED

A shot was fired in the air last night by a policeman after a suspected purse-snatcher shouted, "Go ahead and kill me." The officer caught the suspect, a former convict, after a short chase.
Patrolmen James Connors and John Gresham, driving at Hadley street and Delmar boulevard about 9 o'clock, saw a man resembling a robber who took a purse containing $26 from Miss Pamela Lyon at Eighth street and Franklin avenue a few minutes earlier.
Connors got out of the car and ordered the man to halt. The suspect shouted the invitation to the policeman to shoot him, and then ran. Patrolman Connors fired a shot in the air, and caught the man at Linden and Thirteenth streets.
The prisoner said he is Willie Stamps, 35 years old, living in the 3000 block of Belle Glade avenue. His pockets contained $26, including a $2 bill, which Miss Lyon reported stolen. Stamps, whose record includes terms in the penitentiary and workhouse, refused to say where he got the money. He was identified by Miss Lyon and a witness to the purse snatching.
Miss Lyon, who lives at 7234 Coronado avenue, said Stamps twisted her arms, grabbed her purse and shoved her to the sidewalk. The purse was not recovered.
Two employees and a customer were held up last night in a drug store at 2836 Chouteau avenue by two men who stole $50 and two wrist watches.
The robbers ordered Miss Julie Martin and Michael Doyle, clerks, and the customer into a rear room. One man, armed with a revolver, took the cash while the second stole the watches, valued at $12, from a jewelry case. After the robbers fled, Doyle sounded a burglar alarm.

An officer of the American evangelist's organization said today the doctor is Graham's own physician. He would not give the doctor's name.

The spokesman said the doctor was due in Sydney next Friday and would join Graham at Broadbeach, a resort where Graham plans a two-week rest before embarking on a New Zealand preaching campaign early next month. Graham is suffering from a fluctuating swelling in the area of his left eye which causes blurred vision.

Indiana Mayor Admits Faking Robbery to Hide Swindle Loss

GREENSBURG, Ind., March 17 (AP)—Mayor Sheldon Smith admitted last night he slashed himself with a razor then invented a story about being cut and robbed by three men.

The 39-year-old mayor said he made up the story "to explain the loss of the money and hide the shame of being taken through one of the oldest confidence games, the pigeon drop." The missing $7178 belonged to the city.

When asked for details of the slashing and confidence game, Smith said, "I'm too ashamed to talk about it."

Prosecutor Richard Garvey said the mayor "won't be persecuted, but we may seek perjury charges against him."

Smith said he would not seek re-election this year and "didn't plan to before this came up."

Earlier yesterday, Smith returned the $7178 and said "moral responsibility" led him to borrow money to repay the city court funds.

Smith, who also serves as city judge, has accumulated the money since 1957, but had not deposited it. The exact amount was determined in an audit by the State Board of Accounts.

Garvey said Smith told him he became "so concerned that an innocent person was suffering the loss of freedom that he decided to unveil the mystery." Smith had identified Forest Hollars, 40 years old, Dayton, O., as one of the three men who attacked him.

Smith's original story was that he had been lured to his private office the night of Feb. 21 on the pretext of filling out an income tax return. The mayor is an accountant in private life.

He said two of the men held him while the other methodically slashed him with a razor blade.

The mayor suffered superficial cuts and a sprained neck which he blamed on his attackers. He said he collapsed and hit his head on a desk.

The admission that the story was invented came after Smith underwent a lie detector test at state police headquarters in Indianapolis yesterday, and it was revealed that Hollars had been cleared by a similar test.

URGES PUBLIC FUNDS' USE FOR RAPID TRANSIT

By a Staff Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch.

WASHINGTON, March 17—Public funds should be provided for developing needed rapid transit facilities in large metropolitan areas, the urban county congress of the National Association of County Officials was told today.

Addressing a panel discussion dealing with urban transportation problems, Donald C. Hyde, general manager of the Cleveland (O.) transit system, said federal, state and local governments should share part of the expense of developing high-speed mass transportation systems.

About 1000 county officials and other delegates are attending the congress, which is devoted to a study of problems affecting urban counties. The meeting started Sunday and will be concluded tomorrow.

Hyde said both rapid transit systems and improved highways are required to meet the transportation needs of rapidly growing metropolitan areas. Public funds therefore should be used to bear some of the cost of providing transit systems, just as they are used in construction of roads and highways, he said.

"If the co-ordination of rapid transit systems and highways is on the premises that it is good for the community as a whole," he observed, "then the community as a whole should pay for it. Transit riders alone should not be expected to pay the entire cost."

He suggested that public funds could be used for providing additional space in expressway rights of way to accommodate rail systems or express buses. They also could be used in providing parking space at suburban stations along rapid transit lines to encourage greater use of mass transportation facilities, he said.

Citing experiences in Cleveland, Hyde said that the transit system there added two miles to its rapid transit line and opened two new stations last fall with space for commuters to park 1500 automobiles.

"The spaces were filled the first week, as were 500 more added soon after," he said.

Senator Frank Carlson (Rep.), Kansas, addressing a luncheon meeting of the congress, said consolidation of city and county governments offers "an ideal solution" to the problem of providing necessary, wide-area services in metropolitan areas that are located largely within a single county.

FUNERAL OF A. N. KILLORAN, FIRE CAPTAIN, THURSDAY

Funeral services for Capt. Arby N. Killoran of the University City Fire Department will be at 2 p.m. Thursday at the Clark undertaking establishment, 1125 Hodiamont avenue, with burial in Laurel Hill Cemetery.

Capt. Killoran, 68 years old, died of a heart attack yesterday when working in the garage at his home, 6329 Bartmer avenue, University City. He had been a fireman for 33 years, starting as a driver. A captain since 1952, he was in charge of Engine House No. 2.

Surviving are his wife, Mrs. Marguerite M. Killoran, four sons and three daughters.

Would Stop Casey Jones Stop. JACKSON, Miss., March 17 (AP)—The Mississippi Public Service Commission yesterday took under advisement a proposal by the Illinois Central Railway Co. to discontinue its agency at Vaughan, except for 90 days during the cotton harvest season. Vaughan is the place where Casey Jones wrecked his train trying to make up time between Memphis, Tenn., and Jackson, Miss.

MOUNTIE CHIEF IN CANADA QUILTS OVER STRIKE ROW

OTTAWA, March 17 (AP)—The chief of the Canadian Mounties—Canada's top policeman—resigned yesterday in a dispute over how to handle the violence arising from a strike of northwoods loggers in Newfoundland.

Commissioner Leonard Hansen Nicholson, head of the red-topped Royal Canadian Mounted Police, had supported a request to Justice Minister Davie Fulton for 50 police reinforcements at Grand Falls.

The original request was made last week by the Newfoundland provincial government. Fulton refused it on the ground that he had to think of the mounties' position in the country as a whole. He added the reinforcement "would have been a party to union-busting."

Nicholson said the government was obligated to supply the reinforcements under its agreement with Newfoundland for the mounties to act as provincial police there.

In St. John's Newfoundland, Premier Smallwood told the provincial Legislature the province will sue the Federal Government for breach of contract.

SELWYN LLOYD CONFERS WITH SUSLOV IN LONDON

LONDON, March 17 (AP)—Foreign Secretary Selwyn Lloyd held a private talk today with Mikhail Suslov, visiting Soviet Communist party secretary. They met at Lloyd's invitation a few hours before Lloyd was due to leave for America with Prime Minister Macmillan. The Foreign Office said the invitation was a routine diplomatic courtesy.

It was assumed their talk ranged over British-Soviet relations and the question of the future of Germany.

Suslov and five other Soviet legislators were invited here by a group of Laborite members of Parliament.

FUNERAL TO BE TOMORROW FOR SISTER MARY AGATHA

Funeral services for Sister Mary Agatha Jahn, O.S.F., who had been a member of the order for 64 years, will be at 9 a.m. tomorrow at the St. Anthony Hospital Chapel, 3520 Chippewa street, with burial in St. Peter and Paul Cemetery.

Sister Mary Agatha, 89 years old, died of infirmities of age Sunday at St. Anthony Hospital. She had served there since 1949. Born in Germany, she entered the order after arriving in this country.

Survivors include a sister, Mrs. Bertha Keil, of Chicago.

secrets from leaking quickly to the Russians.

"This is one field where we are ahead of the Russians," Jackson told a reporter. "What worries many of our people is that the information, if given to the French, could fall into the Russians' hands. The French have a poor security program."

Jackson said he would feel differently about sharing secrets concerning weapons in which this country does not have a clear lead. Jackson heads the subcommittee on military applications of nuclear energy.

Other congressional sources said there have been misgivings at the Pentagon about the French security setup, because of the status Communists hold in France.

CHARGES AGAINST TWO FOR ALTERCATION DROPPED

Peace disturbance charges against James Beard, a box lunch salesman, and Anthony Lesinski, a bus driver, have been dismissed, Pagedale City Attorney Hugo M. Walther said today. Both men declined to prosecute, he said.

Beard and Lesinski were arrested in Pagedale last Jan. 27 after a bottle was thrown through the windshield of the bus Lesinski was driving. The two men had exchanged words when Beard stopped his automobile suddenly in front of the bus.

ROBBERS DISDAIN VICTIM'S MEAGER CASH, WALK OUT

Two neatly dressed holdup men left Walter Nicholson's confectionery empty-handed last night, after disdaining the meager contents of the cash drawer.

Nicholson and a customer were chatting in the store, 414 North Boyle avenue, at 10 o'clock when the men walked in. One displayed a revolver and announced a holdup. His companion opened the cash register, which contained only several dollars in coins.

"There's not enough here to bother with," the robber said, closing the register. The second robber pocketed his revolver and the pair departed, leaving a puzzled confectioner and customer staring after them.

MRS. T. C. ALLEN'S FUNERAL

Funeral services for Mrs. T. C. Allen of Springfield, Mo., mother of Preston Estep, St. Louis civic leader, will be tomorrow at Springfield.

Mrs. Allen, 70 years old, died of a heart attack yesterday at Springfield. Estep is president of the Transit Casualty Co. of St. Louis and recently was appointed chairman of the Bi-State Development Agency.

INJUNCTIONS BAR ACTION ON BULLOCK INSURANCE

A temporary injunction restraining James S. Bullock's widow, his aunt and St. Louis county Public Administrator G. Joseph Neaf from prosecuting suits filed against the Aid for Lutherans, a fraternal benefit society, for proceeds of a $5112 insurance policy on Bullock's life, was issued yesterday in United States District Court.

United States District Judge Randolph H. Weber ordered Mrs. Bullock, Neaf and Mrs. Gertrude Christine Duerbeck, Bullock's aunt, to appear April 13 to show cause why the injunction should not be made permanent. In a petition requesting the injunction, the fraternal society asked the court to determine how and to whom the money should be paid.

A similar temporary injunction against Mrs. Bullock and Neaf also was issued yesterday by Judge Weber on petition by Prudential Insurance Co. Bullock carried a $45,000 life insurance policy with the company. Another petition for a temporary injunction was filed last week by General American Life Insurance Co. These also are returnable before Judge Weber on April 13. Bullock was murdered last Dec. 17.

NLRB HEARING ON PETITION INVOLVING JEFFERSON HOTEL

A hearing resulting from a recent National Labor Relations Board announcement that it would assume jurisdiction over large hotels and motels opened here yesterday on a petition by operating engineers employed at the Sheraton-Jefferson Hotel.

Prior to a United States Supreme Court decision late last year suggesting that the Labor Board assert jurisdiction over unfair labor practices and union representation in the hotel industry, the Labor Board refused to consider cases involving hotels. Last Jan. 12, the board announced jurisdiction over hotels and motels which do a business of $100,000 a year or more.

Local 2, Operating Engineers, AFL-CIO, is seeking to form a unit of four stationary engineers employed at the Sheraton-Jefferson. Heretofore, hotels have voluntarily entered into wage agreements with labor unions representing employees.

Voroshilov Reported Improved. MOSCOW, March 17 (AP)—Soviet President Klementis Voroshilov who became ill with pneumonia in late January and February, and was unable to make a scheduled visit to India, is getting better an official said yesterday.

ification of Germany is scarcely mentioned these days, except to say that there is little prospect of making any progress on this point.

Nor is there any indication that the President and the Prime Minister will try to reach any hard decisions on military measures that might be necessary if any attempt is made to force the Western powers out of Berlin.

The President was confident in his speech last night that war over Berlin could be avoided. This confidence is shared by well-informed diplomats in the capital. They note that two years from now, in a suburb yesterday.

neither Chancellor Adenauer of West Germany nor Secretary of State Dulles, the two staunch opponents of concessions to the Soviet Union, is likely to be in his present job. And the indication is that the Soviet missile superiority will be greater then than now.

Accordingly, these officials ask, why would Khrushchev risk war at this point when his chances of negotiating from a stronger relative position would be greater in 1961?

WOOD MATCHES HOLD 75-YEAR PRICE LINE

NEW YORK, March 17 (AP)—The penny may not buy much any more. But after 75 years it will still get you a small box of wooden matches.

These penny box matches, almost alone among popular consumer items, have held the price line since the mid-1880s while prices in general have skyrocketed.

How have penny box matches managed to withstand the inroads of twentieth century inflation?

Automation is the main answer, match men say. Robert G. Fairburn, president of Diamond Gardner Corp., the nation's biggest match producer, explains that "new equipment and automated processes have greatly increased the efficiency of manufacturing operations over the years."

Besides automating practically all operations, the penny match makers have chipped away at raw material costs. For the match splints, they've replaced costlier white pine with aspen, once considered an all but useless wood. For the head of the match, they have uncovered cheaper chemicals and imported these ingredients at costs well below prevailing United States prices.

Uncle Sam, too, has had a small hand in maintaining the penny price. The manufacturers' excise tax, the only hidden tax placed on the matches, has remained unchanged for years. Hidden taxes on most other consumer items, at the same time, have stepped steadily higher.

Penny box matches stand in size between the larger wooden "kitchen" matches and the smaller, paper book matches.

Americans have been striking roughly 10 billion of the penny box matches a year for some time now, according to industry experts. Since the population has multiplied rapidly during those years, that means each American's use of the matches has gradually been tapering off.

Match men attribute this downturn in per capita consumption largely to the spread of rural electrification and gas stoves.

RECORDED VOICE WARNS PILOT OF AIR EMERGENCIES

WASHINGTON, March 17 (AP)—A calm recorded voice may soon warn Air Force pilots of emergencies in flight.

The recording would replace present warning lights and horns. Not only would it alert the pilot, but it would also remind him of required emergency procedures.

For example, if an engine caught fire, the recorded warning and instructions to the pilot would be:

"Fire. . .
"Fire in number three engine."
"Number three engine fire indicator light is on. . .
"Check engine operation to verify if fire is present in number three engine. . .
"Feather number three engine."

The voice warning system is in a small six-pound box containing two reproducers and two sets of tape-recorded messages covering a number of contingencies. When triggered by an unsafe or emergency condition, the right tape is selected automatically and played.

The Air Research and Development Command said the new warning system was developed and is being flight tested at its Wright Air Development Center, Dayton, O.

ALASKANS GIVEN DELAY ON OIL RIGHTS DECISION

WASHINGTON, March 17 (AP)—Alaskan homesteaders who have been asked to waive oil and gas mineral rights have been granted a second extension of time in which to accept or oppose the request.

Elmer F. Bennett, acting secretary of the Interior, announced that homesteaders who were requested to waive interest in oil and gas deposits will have until May 6 or 30 days after receipt of the request in which to file replies.

Those affected are homesteaders whose Alaskan entries have been classified as valuable or possibly valuable for oil and gas development. The classifications were made after the Alaskans started homesteading but before they received final title to the land.

Before You Buy Scotch Again, Read This:

There is a Scotch available right now that many consider a truly great "find". Not as well known in this country as some brands, it is nevertheless the top-selling favorite in Edinburgh—the capital of the land that knows Scotch quality best. It's King George IV and it is distilled from the rarest and most sought-after Highland whiskies. No surprise, then, that many Americans who have discovered it prefer King George IV to brands they formerly drank. Try it soon, yourself.

UNITED STATES OF AFRICA URGED BY GUINEA CHIEF

By ROBERT AHIER

CONAKRY, Guinea, March 17 (UPI)—Premier Sekou Toure of the newly-formed Republic of Guinea says the only way to solve the dark continent's complex problems is complete independence for every African state and formation of a "United States of Africa."

Toure, a 37-year-old former trade union leader who rose in 10 years to become the head of the world's newest nation, said in an interview that Africans must run their own affairs.

"Whether you like it or not, he said, 'all African states which grew up under colonialism have the same problems, the same interests and the same goals.'

"Their political differences are minor matters which cannot stand in the way of full independence and unity."

He said that in the "wider picture" he and other African leaders were "seeking a United States of Africa which will be completely independent."

Nationalist Leader.
Toure himself intends to be in the forefront of the African nationalist movement.

The premier, who has attended schools in Moscow and other Communist capitals, led Guinea a country of 4,500,000 people to independence last Oct. 28 in Gen. Charles de Gaulle's French referendum. It was the only one of the French African possessions to vote for independence. The others remained as republics in a commonwealth-style "French community."

Toure received this correspondent in the white building which had been the residence of the French governor of Guinea. Now it is his home and the nerve center of the struggle to build a prosperous nation.

Unlike neighboring Ghana, where Britain prepared a territory for independence and then granted it in a smooth transition, Guinea must learn from scratch.

More than 3500 French civil servants walked out of their jobs in Guinea last fall. Bitter citizens charged they took with them everything from government-issued fountain pens to the plans for Conakry's sewer.

Now Negro Guineans have replaced the Frenchmen, struggling with jobs they have had to learn without assistance.

Passport Line-Up.
Long lines form at the airport where one Guinean stamps passports—a job once done by three Frenchmen. Downtown, three men try to run a government office formerly staffed by 12 Frenchmen.

Yet, Toure said proudly that Guinea was learning rapidly and held no ill-will toward France.

"We have nothing against France and the French now that we are completely free, and we have normal diplomatic relations with them," he said.

He said the recently announced "federation" of Guinea and Ghana was perfectly compatible with his declared intention of remaining within the franc trading zone. He laughed off French fears that Ghana was trying to draw Guinea into the British Commonwealth.

"Sooner or later we shall achieve complete economic and cultural unity with Ghana," he said.

Toure insisted that the trade links he has forged with Russia and the Communist eastern European nations could not affect Guinea's sovereignty, and were made on "a basis of liberty and equality."

These links were considerable. Russia has bought the entire banana crop for the coming year. But Toure said he wanted trade with all nations.

"We want Western nations to continue investing in Guinea in greater strength than ever before," he said.

Modern Programs.

Toure and his government are driving full speed ahead with a program aimed at turning Guinea into a modern state.

When Guinea became independent, some 17,000 of its menfolk were serving in the French army. They have now returned home and many have been sent to the jungles to build roads and other public works.

Conakry's streets are swept by voluntary workers and their spotlessness shows up well against other towns of the African west coast.

The powerful Foulah tribe, which has been largely left out of the running of things in independent Guinea, may shortly demand a greater say in government.

Toure will then have to face the decision of whether to give in to their demands or ignore them and risk the alienation of a powerful segment of his people—solidly united behind him in the first heady days of independence.

The exodus of Frenchmen and French capital from Guinea following independence has brought rumors of an economic crisis.

So far, Toure, aided by a £10,000,000 ($28,000,000) loan from Ghana, has staved this off.

HAVE LION, WILL TRAVEL

SAN GABRIEL, Calif., March 17 (UPI)—Don Vroubel complains that a new city law will force him to move to another town.

The city recently outlawed lions as pets. Vroubel is devoted to his 3-month-old lion cub.

Making It Legal.
EAST HARTFORD, Conn., March 17 (UPI)—The Connecticut legislature has been asked to legalize the marriage of 40 couples who had been wed by a justice of the peace who didn't realize he was past mandatory retirement age.

AKINS-JORDAN TITLE BOUT POSTPONED; CHAMPION'S WIFE ILL

April 24 New Date For Fight At Kiel

By W. J. McGoogan

The welterweight championship fight between Virgil Akins, St. Louis, and Don Jordan, Los Angeles, has been postponed from April 3 to April 24 at the request of Champion Jordan, who asked for the change because of the illness of his wife.

It was the second postponement of the match, originally set for March 6 at The Arena. The date was changed to April 3 after the tornado damaged the Oakland avenue building. Last week Jordan's wife gave birth to a premature baby and the boxer said that her health would not permit him to leave her at this time.

Charles W. Pian, Missouri Athletic Commissioner, and Promoter Sam Muehnick, agreed to the change. So did Bernie Glickman and Eddie Yawitz, co-managers of Akins after they had talked with Harry Markson, Madison Square Garden, New York, which has the television rights to the show.

Muehnick said he has been guaranteed that Jordan will be in St. Louis April 14 to finish his training. The champion has been granted $2000 expense money to be in St. Louis 10 days ahead of the contest.

Muehnick said there has been a good advance ticket sale, which began last Friday, and that nearly $10,000 worth had been sold.

Sam originally had the Auditorium reserved for a wrestling show on April 3. He changed that because of the boxing match. Now he says he will switch back and present wrestling on the earlier date.

He also had the Auditorium for April 24 for wrestling but will change that to the boxing date.

Akins lost the title in his first defense after having won it with a fourth-round knockout over Vince Martinez at The Arena on June 6 last.

In the contract for the bout with Jordan there was a return match clause which provided that Jordan would grant Akins a bout within 90 days should he defeat the St. Louis welterweight. This he did and, after fighting one bout in Los Angeles, Jordan signed the contract to meet Akins the second time.

Now the contest has been postponed again.

Cincinnati, W. Virginia Favored

LOUISVILLE, Ky., March 17 (UPI)—The records and the ratings made Cincinnati and West Virginia the favorites today to meet in the final of the NCAA basketball tournament here Saturday night, but Louisville's own comeback kids were getting plenty of support.

Louisville faces West Virginia in one semifinal game Friday night for the Eastern championship, with Cincinnati and California tangling in the other for the Western title. The winners will meet Saturday night to determine who picks up the NCAA crown which Louisville unceremoniously tipped off Kentucky's brow in the mid-east regionals at Evansville, Ind., and then came back to trim Michigan State. Ironically, this did nothing to boost the ticket sale. Freedom Hall, the State Fairgrounds Coliseum, had been a complete sellout for weeks. NCAA officials are considering the possibility of having a closed-circuit TV showing of the game in an adjoining wing of the Coliseum, where an additional 10,000 fans might be accommodated at general admission prices. Freedom Hall itself seats just under 19,000 for basketball.

Cincinnati, the Missouri Valley Conference champion, comes in with a 25-3 record, the nation's top scorer in Oscar Robertson, and a victory over Kansas State in the Midwest regional final. West Virginia, Southern Conference representative, boasts a 27-4 record and one of the nation's smoothest performers in Jerry West, who twice saved the Mountaineers from disaster with late-scoring bursts in tournament play. California, from the Pacific Coast Conference, has a 23-4 mark built on the nation's best defensive record. The Bears have allowed opponents only 51.5 points a game, and have won their last 14 games in a row.

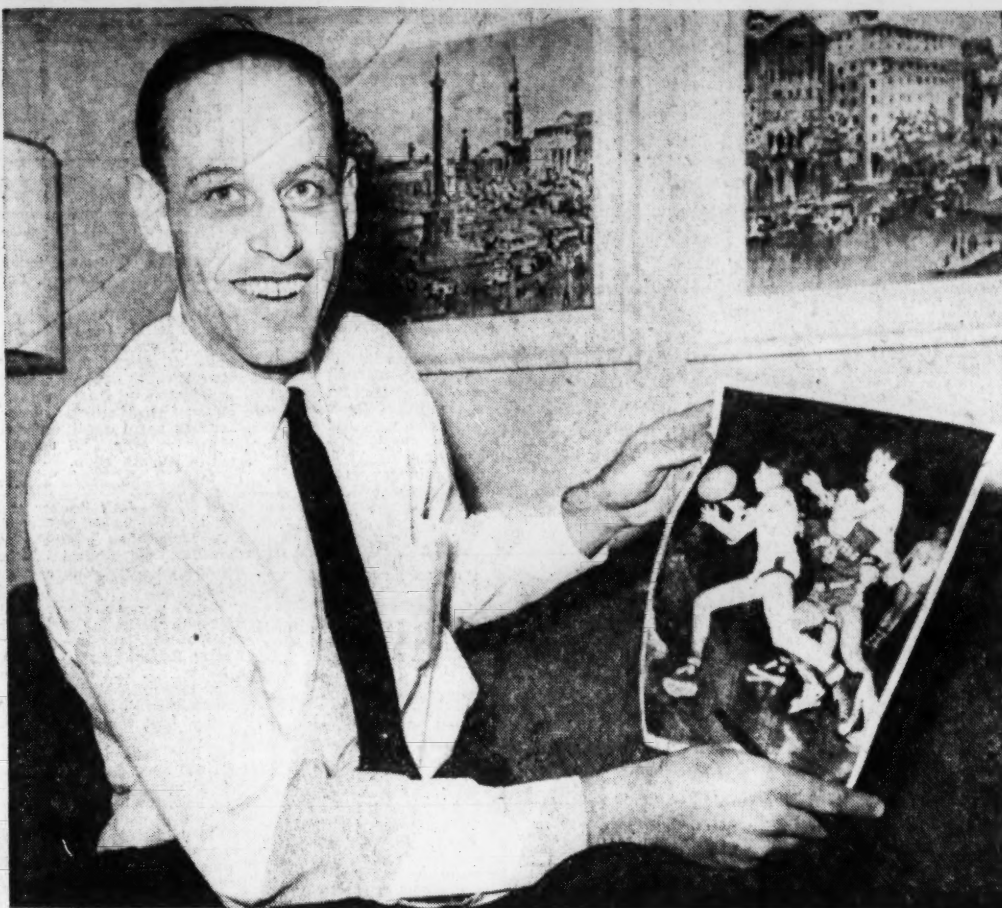

Louisville, with only two seniors on its squad, had only a 9-9 record going into February, but the Cards suddenly turned into a driving, rebounding, hot-shooting ball club that won 10 of its last 11 games before scoring its three tournament victories, and now has a 19-10, over-all record.

Cape Girardeau Favored in Meet

MARSHALL, Mo., March 17 (UPI)—Cape Girardeau is a slight favorite in the NIAA indoor track meet to be held Saturday in Brewer Field House on the University of Missouri campus.

Kirksville, with the most point winners from last year's meet, is expected to press Cape Girardeau for the crown. Cape Girardeau won both the indoor and outdoor NIAA meets in 1958.

The 15-event affair will begin at 6 p.m. Saturday.

When Benington Was One of the Boys

JOHN BENINGTON, coach of the St. Louis University basketball team now in New York in the National Invitation Tournament, holds a picture of himself when he played in the N.I.T. with San Francisco U. in 1949. The Associated Press photo taken then shows him at right, passing the ball to teammate RENE HERRERIAS against Manhattan College. San Francisco won the tournament that year. Benington's second-seeded Billikens see their first action in the current N.I.T. tonight when they play Providence College in a quarterfinal-round game. Pollet Optimistic About Cards' Hurling Prospects for Season

By Bob Broeg
Post-Dispatch Sports Editor

ST. PETERSBURG, Fla., March 17—Howard Pollet, making as good an early impression coaching as he did pitching, spoke with optimism today about a staff he expects to have qualify if not big-name brilliance at the top.

"I believe we'll have good pitching," said the former famous Cardinal lefthander, returning to the club and to the big leagues after two years spent full-time as Eddie Dyer's insurance associate in Houston. As trim at 38 as most of his better-conditioned pitchers, Pollet indicated that he was most interested now in seeing Lindy McDaniel under game conditions and in watching Dean Stone, former American League lefthander acquired from the Red Sox's Minneapolis farm club last weekend in exchange for righthander Nelson Chittum.

Minds Not Made Up. "It's not that Solly (Hemus) or I have made up our minds about all the other pitchers," said the stylish southpaw of the Cardinals' championship, "but rather, that McDaniel has looked so good on the sidelines and in batting practice. And I'd like to see Stone to get an idea of how we stand with lefthanders."

Pollet picked up a National League roster book he had been studying when rain prevented the Cardinals' trip yesterday to Sarasota, vacated Florida home of the Red Sox and now taken over as one of the three spring homes of the big league gypsies, the Dodgers. Sam Jones and Sal Maglie, were reassigned to oppose Cincinnati here this afternoon but rain again prevented play.

"I've been looking over the hitters," said Pollet. "There certainly are fewer lefthanded hitters than when I was pitching, and therefore less need for lefthanded pitching."

The Good Old Days. At one time the Redbirds' staff, best in the league, included Pollet, Harry Brecheen, Max Lanier and Al Brazle as southpaws. Now, Wilmer Mizell is the only regular lefthanded starter, though the veteran Alex Kellner, just recently recovered from a wrenched knee, is regarded as a spot pitcher on the front line.

"A good pitcher who can get over a pitch other than his fast ball when he's behind on the count needn't fear lefthanded or righthanded hitters," observed Pollet, twice a 20-game winner. "But there still is an edge for the lefthanded pitcher facing the lefthanded hitter. And this is a righthanded-hitting league with parks, like San Francisco and Los Angeles, as well as Cincinnati, Chicago and Philadelphia, better suited for righthanded hitters."

"So," he emphasized, "we'll need only about three lefthanded pitchers, maybe just two."

Reasons for Optimism. Pollet bracketed young righthanders Ernie Broglio and Gary Blaylock with probable starters Mizell, Jones and Larry Jackson as his main reasons for evaluating the pitching outlook as good.

Stone, the lefthander the seven-time father would like to see, isn't due in camp until tomorrow, club officials said, but Curt Flood came in from Army camp in California just in time to lose his contemplated first workout to the weather.

The fleet Flood, only 21 years old, batted .261 in 121 games as a rookie last year, falling off as the season progressed. He hit 10 homers and fielded and threw well in center field, but at the moment he has lost his position to Gino Cimoli. It will be interesting to see how little Flood, who reported a trifle overweight, will react to the situation.

A year ago Curt became curt when he was optioned to Omaha late in spring training. Then he became angry and hit so well the first three weeks in the American Association that he quickly was recalled by the Redbirds.

Two for Mountaineers. West Virginia will play in two mid-season basketball tournaments next season—the Kentucky Invitational at Lexington, and the Christmas Invitational in Los Angeles.

Griffith admitted the Sox haven't made any new proposals for Sievers since the winter meetings.

"If I took several second fliers in a package deal for Sievers like the White Sox offered me," said Griffith, "I wouldn't be as well off as I am with just Sievers. At least I know he's one of the great sluggers in the league. He's an attraction. He means more to us than having three mediocre players."

"If I had to make a guess

Ehmke Dies; Star of A's In '29 Series

PHILADELPHIA, March 17 (UPI)—Howard Ehmke, who struck out a record 13 batters as a surprise starter for the Philadelphia Athletics in the 1929 World Series and who was a star righthander in the American League for 15 seasons, died in Germantown Hospital today.

Ehmke, who would have been 65 next month, held the one-game series strikeout record until Carl Erskine of the Brooklyn Dodgers fanned 14 New York Yankees in 1953.

The pitching ace, a native of Silver Creek, N.Y., hurled six seasons for the Detroit Tigers, three seasons and part of a fourth with the Boston Red Sox, and finished with a 4-year stint with the Athletics. His major league career started in 1916.

Ehmke was 36 and past his prime when Connie Mack named him to start the 1929 series, bypassing such hurlers as Lefty Grove, Rube Walberg and George Earnshaw. He struck out 13 Chicago Cubs to set a series strikeout record.

He left baseball after the 1930 season and had a canvas fabricating business here. He featured the manufacture of covers for sports fields.

Ganningers To Play in U.S. Meet

The Bob Ganningers, who finished second and third at the Meramec Caverns the past two years, will make another bid for the National Women's Basketball Association title this weekend at Kansas City.

In the 1957 tournament at Buffalo, N.Y., the Ganningers took second place. Last year they finished third at Kansas City. Defending champions are the South Bend Rockettes, only team to defeat Coach Harley James' Ganningers this season. The Rockettes beat the St. Louisans here, 46-41, and 50-47 at South Bend.

The Ganningers have a 29-2 record including a 15-0 mark in winning the title in the Salvation Army Thursday league. They have piled 40 straight league victories in three seasons.

Billikens 8-Point Favorites

By Robert Morrison

Of the Post-Dispatch Staff

NEW YORK, March 17—All-America Bob Ferry and his St. Louis University basketball mates are eight-point or better favorites to make unhappy a lot of people from Providence, R.I., tonight.

This was the early line on the Billikens' 6:30 p.m. St. Louis time game against Providence College in a National Invitation Tournament double-header at Madison Square Garden.

In the other game Oklahoma City U. (20-6) will see tournament action for the first time, like St. Louis, when the Chiefs tackle New York U. (13-7).

These two games will complete determination of Thursday's semifinal-round contenders. Top-seeded Bradley waits as the next foe for the O.C.U.-N.Y.U. winners and St. John's of New York faces the St. Louis-Providence winner.

New Honor for Ferry.

The 6-foot-8 Ferry, averaging 21.5 points a game through the Bills' 20-and-5 season thus far, will go into the game as a full-fledged All-America player. Named previously on second and third teams of most agencies, he was one of 10 chosen on the United States Basketball Writers' Association squad announced today.

Others named on the squad were Oscar Robertson, Cincinnati U.; Bob Boozer, Kansas State; John Cox, Kentucky; Jerry West, West Virginia; Bailey Howell, Mississippi State; Johnny Green, Michigan State; Lou Puccio, North Carolina State; Alan Seiden, St. John's, and Tom Hawkins, Notre Dame.

Providence, with a 19-5 record after upsetting Manhattan, 68-66, in its N.I.T. opener, is a school of 2,000 students. The Friars, as they are called, are expected to have a rooting contingent of some 3,000 at one end of the Garden court tonight, all in a tizzy over their tournament chances.

But if Friar fans don't go home disappointed, St. Louis U. followers, close and afar, will be shocked. The Bills have a great height edge in their tall front line, and they are second only to Bradley in tournament play.

John Benington, returning as Billiken coach to the N.I.T. in which he captained the title-winning San Francisco University team in 1949, could reasonably hope to reach at least the final again.

After a Billiken workout, it

Sports Comment By Bob Broeg Post-Dispatch Sports Editor

Hail Ray Eliot!

ST. PETERSBURG, Fla., March 17—St. Patrick's day, traditionally the date on which spring football begins at Notre Dame, might not seem appropriate to write about a man with the wienerschnitzel surname of Nuss-pickel.

But if that man is Ray Eliot, ah, now's there a name to remember, especially any time when football comes to mind.

The immediate hope is that the retiring gridiron coach at Illinois will go out next fall with the winner he deserves, the appropriate farewell to football that unfortunately escaped Missouri's Don Faurot a couple of years ago in last-second losses which kept the Tigers out of the Orange Bowl.

Maybe the Fighting Illini will rise up and give Eliot a Big Ten title and another trip to the Rose Bowl before he turns attention to administrative duties as assistant athletic director, a job that has been vacant at Champaign since former Cardinal Outfielder Wally Roettger's death several years ago.

We should have known that Illinois, which has had fewer football coaches (two) than college presidents the last 45 years, wouldn't turn out a man who gave so much from the time he arrived there in 1928—with eight dollars and three shirts.

Of Glory Moments

Personally, we've always been sorry we had little opportunity to be around the powerful baldish man who overcame extreme nearsightedness to become first a rugged guard for the Orange and Blue, then successor as coach to fabulous Bob Zuppke.

They'll remember Ray for his 1946 team that romped over UCLA in the first Rose Bowl game of the post-war inter-conference series, 45-14, and they'll recall—as the Cardinals' Chuck Essegian does wryly—the unbeaten '51 team that ripped through Stanford at Pasadena, 40-7.

Around Moose Hall in pregame press parties he'll probably attend now the night before home games at Champaign, they'll talk about the upsets for which the man was noted, beginning with a stunner over Minnesota, his first season as coach, 1942.

As a coach the bespectacled man in the brown hat did have, as the Associated Press put it, "an uncanny knack for getting any kind of an Illini team up for a big game."

Mainly, though, we'll think of him as the kind of man who told friend Bob Morrison of the Post-Dispatch sports staff just the other week in St. Louis:

"If you send your boy to Illinois I know we'll give you back a boy as good as when he came to us—or better."

Character-building has become a cliché because so many coaches have made it a mockery, but to men who knew him, like Morrison and Dave Condon of the Chicago Tribune, Eliot helped build better men than even teams.

A Way With Words

As a speaker Eliot became as inspirational as the Horatio Alger personality the poor boy from Brighton, Mass., emulated when he argued for a chance to play at Illinois. "Please, coach," he insisted, "I gotta play. If I don't win my freshman numeral sweater, I'm gonna freeze to death."

His best expression probably, though, came with a pen four years ago when he won the Pop Warner football prayer-writing contest in which 1,500 prep and college coaches participated. Wrote Ray:

"As we gather here today, we take a moment, Lord, to pray

That You will guide us in our play
And show us how to go
Thy way.
Make us honest, fair and true

In this game and all we do."

Broke when he was married, Eliot quickly lived up to the motto—"if you think you can do it, you can"—that he had tacked up in his room. He honeymooned in Europe.

Always a fast man with a buck, a check-grabber who at nearly 54 suddenly found some alumni grumbling increasingly, especially in the Chicago area, Eliot might have wished he had been less hospitable as a host, less loyal when Southern California

Centralia Next Opponent for Madison's Four-Leaf Clover Club

Sweet 16' Opens on 8 Fronts

By Harold Tuthill
Of the Post-Dispatch Staff

SALEM, Ill., March 17.—Madison's starting Trojans hope they have the luck of the Irish when they meet Centralia this St. Patrick's day. Game time for the first round of the 16-team Illinois finals is 8 o'clock.

Certainly Bud Mueller's Trojans have had their share of good fortune in the bag end of the basketball year. After a so-so season of 10 victories and 11 defeats, they caught fire. They are now 15-11 with a six-game winning streak working. They have been on top in seven of their last eight games, their one loss during that time being to Dupo, 86-52, in Midwestern Conference competition. In their league the Trojans were just a .500 club with a 5-5 record.

Mueller attributes the recent success of the Trojans to their balanced scoring attack. "And here's an interesting note," he said. "Only two of our first seven are seniors. Two are juniors and three are sophomores."

Three Close Shaves. Robert (6-2) Price, a junior, has been the stopper of Madison's late surge. In the eliminations he scored 41 field goals and 28 free throws for 110 points as Madison won three of its five contests by one or two points.

The Trojans shocked highly-regarded Alton, 62 to 60, in two overtime in the Wood River regional. They defeated Edwardsville, 68-53 and edged Wood River, 75 to 71, to move on to Granite City. In the sectional they then tipped Jerseyville, 61-59, and sidelined Litchfield, 76-63.

Price's spree of 100 points improved his season average to 16.9 points a game for 14 outings. He missed the other games because of an injury. Jake Young, the other junior, is 13.9 for 25 games. Ed Modruski, the starting senior, is 5.3 for 17 games, while among the sophomores Ed Walker is 10.1, Bob Simpson, 8.3 and Fred Riddick 14.1. Senior Delancy Scott is the seventh player on the squad.

Then to Champaign. Madison's appearance in the state classic is the first for the Trojans since 1952. If successful tonight, they will advance with winners of seven other supersectionals to quarterfinal play at Champaign Friday. The four survivors then play semifinals Saturday afternoon and the final is scheduled that night.

Madison has a 2-5 mark.

Alex Olmedo In Net Show March 28

Another indoor tennis show is coming up for St. Louis, and it will include the appearance of Alex Olmedo of Peru, the Davis Cup hero for the United States team, and St. Louis's Earl (Butch) Buchholz of a March 28 program at the Washington University field house.

Frank Thompson Jr., an officer of the United States Lawn Tennis Association, said that Perry Jones, captain of the victorious Davis squad, had agreed to bring the international trophy here on that date.

There are likely to be two singles exhibitions and one doubles. Other players are to be announced later.

Olmedo was the big hero with a key victory over Ashley Cooper as the U.S. team wrested the big bowl from Australia last December.

High school students will be admitted for $1 to the March 28 program.

Prior to last night's pro show here, nationally-ranked boy and girl players from last season appeared in a brief exhibition. Cliff Buchholz and Justina Bricks appeared with Jim Parker and Claude Bakewell Jr.

Mal Anderson had an appointment with a St. Louis doctor for treatment of his back injury and a cold. . . . After that the pros were to move to Kansas City by station wagon.

Olin Parks, tour director, said he could not immediately determine how much the St. Louis Tennis Club, co-sponsors of the pro show, would realize for junior development in this area.

"We must see a complete report of expenses, rental, etc.," he said.—H.F.

appeared that Benington was counting on his sophomore guard, Glen Mankowski, to return to the team he showed during the regular season here when he keyed a 78-62 victory over N.Y.U., scoring 24 points.

Mankowski had a late-season slump during which the shorter Jim Dailey and Tom Smith were starting guards most of the time. They may be the starters again. But a sharp Mankowski will be a big help to the Bills.

Bob Nordmann, the 6-10 sophomore giant of the St. Louis team, continues to limp on an ankle injured in the Cincinnati game but if he is needed he can play some, Benington said.

A standstill for Providence is a six-foot sophomore named Johnny Egan, who is averaging about the same as Ferry's mark of 21.5. But the tallest on the Friar front line is Pete Ferretti at 6-6, and others are Len Wilkins (6-2) and John Woods (6-5). These compare to Ferry at 6-8, George Burkel at 6-7, and Pete McCaffrey at 6-5.

If the Bills can win, they next will be playing a St. John's team that they decisively defeated at St. Louis, 72-63. If they lose, however, they are out and finished for the season.

Richard (Pancho) Gonzales, the four-time professional tennis champion from Los Angeles, seems to have mellowed a bit in his bid for a fifth straight title on Jack Kramer's tour.

Always a fierce competitor with an intense desire to win, Gonzales somewhat surprised a St. Louis gathering of 2791—if not Umpire Monroe C. (Pope) Lewis—by taking it a bit easy on Australia's Mal Anderson, just recovering from a back injury and scheduled for treatment of a cold today.

Gonzales, using more change of pace with drop shots and flashing a finesse not shown in most previous appearances, and Lew Hoad were the singles victors in the three-and-a-half hour show at the Washington University field house last night.

Pancho, one of the hardest hitters in tennis in the last 15 or 20 years and a player who constantly "stalks" his opponent, used aggressive lobs, sharp placements and, naturally, his big serve to defeat Anderson, 8-6, 6-2.

Hoad, hitting the ball with terrific force on nearly every shot, used superior volleys and dazzling placements to turn back Ashley Cooper, the 1958 Wimbledon and United States amateur champion, 6-2, 6-4.

In the doubles, in which Gonzales proved an entertaining court clown as well as a durable hitter, Hoad and Cooper won from Pancho and Anderson in one pro set, 8-4. That's when Gonzales, not wishing to appear too mellow, did a little bickering with Umpire Lewis. He seemed only half serious, however.

When asked about his use of drop shots and other slow stuff against Anderson, Gonzales said: "Mal is just getting back his strength after that back ailment. If I'd hit some shots like that to Hoad, he'd put 'em back down my throat."

The talk of the tour—Olin Parks was a spokesman for Promoter Kramer, who skipped St. Louis to become advance man in other Midwest spots—was Hoad's improved temperament. Gonzales' realization that the pressure is now on the champion and the tremendous recent strides of "Rookies" Anderson and Cooper.

Last year Hoad, who in 1957 had been the darling of Wimbledon and Australia, built an 18-lead on Gonzales in head-to-head competition. But the killer instinct started to show in the Californian about that time. Gonzales won 24 of the next 33 matches and the final.

nia beckoned eight years ago and he turned his back on more money because friends, students and other Illini faculty members asked him to stay. He might have wished, too, as Harold Tuthill recalled, that he had taken the Washington U. job of less pressure that was as tempting to him several years ago as it finally proved to another big-name coach, Carl Snively.

In all probability, though, Ray Eliot must have felt it all worthwhile, including the risk, when after he had been changed in effigy on the campus last fall, the doorbell rang at his home and he was met by an apologetic student, the boy who had acted before he thought.

The affection in which the vast majority held him was reflected, too, by a new job he'll tackle with the same old college try.

It was Gonzales, meeting in the round robin Cooper and Anderson each are 3-8 and it was Cooper, showering after the doubles, who suggested, "I'm just about getting accustomed to the pro routine of playing night after night in different cities. I understand it's rough on all newcomers."

Showing for the first time before the home folks since his great record in 1958, Earl (Butch) Buchholz, bigger, stronger and hitting harder than ever, won a one-set exhibition from his old junior buddy, Chuck McKinley. The score was 6-2 and both impressed the gallery with several amazing shots and sureness of returns.

It was Gonzales, meeting them coming off the court, who said, "You guys are awful tough. I'm glad you're amateurs and not professionals." Cooper and Hoad, too, were impressed with the St. Louisans' court coverage. "Buchholz has come a long way in the last year," said Cooper, who's seen Butch in numerous tournaments.

Indians Seek Two Senators

ST. PETERSBURG, Fla., March 17 (UPI)—A rainy day in the Florida baseball camps usually produces trades and or rumors of trades.

It was that kind of a day on the citrus circuit Monday. Four exhibition games were rained out, so several possible player transactions were reportedly being discussed.

The New York Yankees, concerned over Don Larsen's recurrent shoulder ailment, have turned again to the Washington Senators for pitching help. The world champions would like to pry either Pedro Ramos or Dick Hyde loose from the Nats. They also are eyeing Southpaw Billy Hoef of the Detroit Tigers.

The Senators, in turn, have indicated they are willing to peddle Roy Sievers. The Cleveland Indians may wind up with both Ramos and Sievers. Frank Lane plans to confer with Griffith tomorrow at St. Petersburg, Fla. The Cleveland general manager is expected to offer Outfielder Minnie Minoso. Pitcher Jim Grant and Infielder Woody Held for the Nats' pair.

In the only two exhibition games played yesterday, the Kansas City Athletics blanked the Tigers, 6-0, and Ted Kluszewski's first spring home run sparked the Pittsburgh Pirates to a 4-1 victory over the Cincinnati Redlegs.

Ned Garver, making his first start of the year, limited his former Detroit teammates to two hits over the first five innings. Walt Craddock was just as effective, permitting only three safeties the rest of the way. Home runs by Roger Maris and Kent Hadley paced Kansas City's 13-hit attack.

Vernon Law pitched the first seven innings for Pittsburgh, allowing only three hits. The Redlegs didn't enjoy any better luck against Law's successor, rookie Jim Hardison, who pitched hitless ball the rest of the way.

On other fronts: Rookie Frank Howard hit a 420-foot home run during a Los Angeles Dodger camp game. . . . Pitcher Moe Drabowsky engaged in his first workout with the Chicago Cubs since suffering a fractured right thumb.

Manager Eddie Sawyer of the Phillies announced that batting champion Richie Ashburn will be dropped from lead-off hitter to the No. 2 spot this season. . . . Pitcher Al Worthington ended his holdout with the San Francisco Giants, signing for a reported $17,000.

Soccer at Two Parks Tonight

By Dent McSkimming

St. Engelbert soccer team probably will have to get along without the services of star center halfback Jack Dueker when it plays South Side in a Carondelet Park. Dueker suffered a gashed forehead when he collided with Chicago forward Ed Murphy in the Olympic trial game at Public Schools Stadium Sunday afternoon. Tonight's game will start at 8 o'clock.

The cup doubleheader at Fairground Park tonight will match Holy Rosary and Jadran in the first game, at 7:15, and Carondelet S.M.A.C. with Compton-Shenandoah, at 9.

Sunday's Carling semifinals will be: Kutis I vs. the Rosary-Jadran winner, and the Carondelet-Co m p n Shenandoah winner against the South Side-St. Engelbert survivor.

Because of a scarcity of available dates, officials have announced the local final of the U.S. Junior Cup competition as a preliminary to Sunday's doubleheader. But many followers of the Juniors feel that this meeting at St. Paul and Holy Rosary deserves a setting that would assure better attendance.

The preliminary on a three-game program usually is started at 12 noon. Only the close friends and relatives of players have been turning out for such an early start. And if that happens Sunday most of the day's patrons will miss a treat, possibly the most exciting game of the day.

East's Turn to Pick Olympic squad selections for the eastern area states will come out of two days of trials at Brooklyn College field Saturday and Sunday. In the past, the East has contributed some fine players to the national team and the quality of play there this season is reportedly better than in the past eight years.

The victory of the Philadelphia picked stars over Sweden's Helsingborg team last Saturday and the 2-2 draw obtained by New York Hakoah in the game with the Swedish tourists Sunday indicates some real soccer talent in those U.S. cities.

The West Coast is expected to be reflected, among others, a fine center forward in Al Zerkusen.

The accident of scarcity of good men, or of an excess of the same commodity certainly has a strong influence on a player's success or failure in Olympic trials. For example, neither Bill O'Brien nor George Endler played nearly up to his best form in the trials, yet both were selected for the midwest squad. . . . On the other hand,

C.B.C. Gets Friday Off

C.B.C. will get a holiday Friday in recognition of the team's recent championship in the Missouri Class L basketball tournament. The announcement was made today by Brother H. Bernard, the school principal.

Among telegrams received congratulating the Cadets on winning were two from St. Louis U. High, their longtime friendly rival. Another greeting came from Brother Regis, former athletic director who heard the title game broadcast over KSD on his set in Winona, Minn.

John Vitale, Jack Dueker and Sammy Davis looked very good, Dan Range had a fine day, Saturday, and several of the out-of-town players were extra sharp.

There was no great right winger to challenge O'Brien for his spot and only one center, Walter Ronge, to give Endler a battle. . . . But there was a plentitude of backs and goalkeepers who looked to be of Olympic team caliber, so Vitale, Davis and Nick Riglio of St. Louis and Peter Hennig of St. Paul and some other good ones became casualties.

But, on the whole, the committee came out with a good, solid squad that should fare well against the pick of the East and the West, combined, in the April 19 test here.

Mrs. Hohman Wins Women's Pin Event

Mrs. Verna Hohman, a 143-average bowler, rolled 579 scratch, which with a 126-pin handicap gave her a 705 total and victory in the Women's Officers' tourney on the Sports Bowl Lanes. The triumph was worth $100. A total of 725 competed in the first tourney of its kind held by the St. Louis Women's Tenpin Bowling Association.

Eight teams from the Fraternalza Bowling League of St. Louis will meet the Memphis (Tenn.) Italian Society in a bowling tournament for the sixth straight year. The St. Louis will go to Memphis for the first half of the match April 11-12, and the duel will be completed at Esquire Lanes in St. Louis on May 23-24. The St. Louisans have a 3-2 edge in match victories.

Fix Mix Wins In Sherman Tourney, 90-89

Fix Mix withstood a rally by McDonnell and won 90-89 in the Sherman Invitational basketball tournament last night at Tandy Center. First-seeded Pastoris downed Riondos, 94-69. Tonight the Collegians face Bob Soells at 7:15, and Sanford Brown, second-seeded, meets Granite City Engineering Depot at 8:45. The winners will play at 8:45 p.m. tomorrow after Pastoris and Fix Mix meet at 7:15.

TV SETS CHECK

Davey Moore Confident He'll Dethrone Bassey

I'm Next Feather Champion

LOS ANGELES, March 17 (UPI). — If confidence wins fights, then Davey Moore should be taking measurements for the featherweight crown prior to tomorrow night's title bout here with Champion Hogan (Kid) Bassey of Nigeria.

"Write this down in your book," the challenger said after his arrival from his training camp at San Jacinto, Calif. "I'm the next featherweight champion."

And there were a good many besides Moore and his manager, Willie Ketchum, who feel the Springfield, Ohio, contender has better than an even chance to lift Bassey's title in their 15-round nationally televised bout from Olympic Auditorium (on KTVI in St. Louis).

Los Angeles betting circles rate the bout a 6-5, there's choice, toss-up but there is a good deal of sentiment in favor of Moore.

"I've been chasing the champion for a year and a half and now that I've caught up with him I'm not letting the opportunity slip by," Moore said. "I've been ready for a long time and I've trained hard for this one."

Moore, son of a minister, readily admits he was a street fighter until he took up boxing as an amateur. The chunky little challenger in 1952 was national 118-pound champion and advanced to the Olympic Games finals in Finland only to be disqualified for what the referee said was a foul blow.

As a pro, Moore has won 35 out of 41 bouts and scored 16 knockouts without having the count tolled over him once. In fact, he has been knocked down only once in his ring career—in 1954 by St. Louisan Charley Riley in a match in St. Louis. Moore got up and won the decision.

Moore has not lost a bout since he was defeated by Bobby Rogers in 1956 and those he has beaten since then include Ricardo Moreno, whom he knocked out in a single round; Roberto Garcia, Victor Manuel Quijano, Jose Cotero and Gil Cadillo, whom he met on his first televised bout. He has a streak of 13 straight victories going.

Ketchum says that he is confident Bassey can be hit and he feels Moore hits hard enough to hurt the champion. But the veteran manager also believes that if the fight goes the distance, Moore's boxing ability will carry him through to victory.

Because six of his eight bouts last year were in Los Angeles, Moore has become a popular figure here and will be a well-batched contender tomorrow night.

U.S. BONDS SLIGHTLY HIGHER, TRADE LIGHT

NEW YORK, March 17 (AP)—U.S. Government bonds added small fractions in quiet trading late today.

The corporate market turned slightly lower near the close. Investment quality issues were firm and industrials mixed but rails, utilities and foreign bonds shaded lower. Trading was moderately active.

Over the counter dealers quoted both intermediate and long range treasury bonds up 2-32 to 4-32.

A group led by C. J. Devine & Co. placed the apparent best bid for $6,500,000 of Territory of Hawaii improvement bonds. It was 100,269 for 3.30s. Subject to the award, the bonds due 1962-79 were reoffered to yield 2.20 to 3.40 per cent.

The Treasury's short term borrowing costs declined below the 3 per cent level. The latest issue of 13-week bills was sold at a price equivalent to an average of 2.763 per cent, down from 3.062 per cent the previous week. FUN CENTER APPEALS BROADENED

By Sam Dawson

NEW YORK, March 17 (AP)—Huge family fun centers are abuilding across the nation today to greet the hordes of touring Americans this summer.

They are joining the older forms of such entertainment—the more than 400 traditional amusement parks such as Coney Island, and the 5000 small kiddie lands that have been built along main highways or adjacent to metropolitan areas since World War II.

Attendance at these two amusement types is estimated to be more than 500,000,000 a year. The new family recreation centers are hoping to attract from 1,000,000 to 4,000,000 visitors a year each, depending on length of their operating seasons.

PATTERNED IN SCOPE after southern California's Disneyland, each of the new areas now open or rising emphasizes features to stimulate or restore some of the excitement and memorable aspects of local, regional and sometimes national history.

They range in area from 80 to more than 100 acres, with initial investment of from $3,000,000 to $10,000,000. Included in the new group are fun centers near Boston, Denver, Dallas and Santa Monica, Calif.

HERE IS WHAT THIS SAMPLING of the movement will offer. A four million dollar pleasure island will open this summer on 80 acres at Wakefield, near Boston, and will stress yesteryear in New England. As one of its projects it will re-create the whaling industry. Whaling boats built in replica in Maine will take visitors over a manmade ocean to hunt for Moby Dick. A 70-foot copy of the storied great white whale will sound and spout, and manmade sharks will threaten the hunters as they cruise to and from Clipper Cove, a reproduction of an old New England whaling port. Already open near Santa Monica is Pacific Ocean Park. The 10 million dollar development on 28 acres is devoted to a wide variety of marine themes. It is designed to offer both fun and information to all members of the family. The Dallas Recreation Center is built around the theme: Texas under six flags. Its rides, shows and exhibits will cover the long history of the once largest state. Example: card rides between Civil War battle lines.

MAGIC MOUNTAIN, THE Denver Amusement Center, will be set up to let visiting families, among other things, participate vicariously in the old west adventures of the United States Cavalry, trappers and miners. It will lean heavily on the curiosity of generations brought up on novels, movies, radio and TV versions of frontier life. But other recreation centers hope to tap this same rich vein. The Massachusetts center also plans a frontier town where a narrow gauge steam train will carry visitors through outlaw infested hills to a reproduction of an early gold mine, where families can pan for gold. The park developers insist it will be possible actually to find some.

MANAGEMENT OF THESE, and other family recreation centers elsewhere, say that theirs aren't the traditional amusement parks of ferris wheels and tunnels of love. They say the design and construction of the new style centers combine showmanship and dramatic talents, adding to the old type amusements new features that have nostalgic appeal to the older and novelty appeal to the youngsters.

GENERAL BANCSHARES NET $1.30 LAST YEAR

General Bancshares Corporation (formerly, General Contract Corporation) reports 1958 earnings of $3,152,000 or $1.30 a common share after preferred dividends compared with $2,973,000, or $1.20 a common share, for 1957. The report also reflects the spin-off of the General Bancshares Corporation non-banking subsidiaries (insurance, loan, and finance companies) into a new corporation called General Contract Finance Corporation. In 1958 the banking group earned 74 cents per common share and the non-banking group 56 cents.

pillow until noon because she's knocked out from reading Tolstoy till 4 a.m.

Please tell Sheepskin Sarah and her brother I'd gladly trade my wife's fancy Boston accent and perfect English for three successive meals on time.

HACKNEYED HAL.

DEAR HAL: You do pretty well with the language yourself, Bub. Thanks for writing.

DEAR ANN: MAYBE IT'S MY IMAGINATION, but I don't think so. There's a 26-year-old divorced woman who lives next to us in this apartment building. She has a 5-year-old daughter. Our 20-year-old son practically lives over there and it's getting to be more than I can stand.

At first we used to kid him, but now it's past the joking stage. He's painted her apartment and varnished her floors. He runs errands for her all over town (in my car), and I can't get him to do one thing for me—his own mother.

The other evening I walked into her apartment without knocking. My husband said this was impolite and maybe he's right. Anyway, impolite or not, I caught my son with his arm around this woman. He said they were dancing. There was no music. Shall I come right out and tell her to move? My husband said to write to you and get some advice.

NERVOUS MOTHER.

DEAR NERVOUS: If you tell this woman to move she'll probably tell you you're out of your head and to mind your own business. The sledgehammer approach would be an open declaration of war and accomplish nothing. Your husband should have a frank talk with Junior. This woman is too old and too experienced for him. He should be dating high school seniors or college freshmen. His father should point out that he's playing with dynamite and it could wreck his entire life.

DEAR ANN: MY MOTHER AND FATHER were divorced when I was 7 years old. I'm going on 16 and have not seen my father since. Now that I'm older I find myself thinking about my dad a lot.

Two weeks before Christmas I asked my teacher if I should write him a friendly letter and tell him all about my interests and things like that. She said it would be a nice gesture, but not to let my mother know.

I wrote to him and expected some kind of an answer, but so far nothing has come. Do you think maybe the letter was lost in the mail because of the Christmas rush? I decided to ask you if I should write to him again. Please let me know through the paper as Mom wouldn't like this at all.

DOROTHY O.

Dear Dorothy: Your teacher gave you bad advice. In the first place she should not have suggested that you write behind your mother's back. In the second place, if your Dad and Mother have been divorced for nine years and YOU know where HE is, he knows where you are. A father who would make no effort to see his daughter in all this time doesn't deserve any consideration. It's easy to build beautiful fantasies around a Daddy who isn't there. Don't let your imagination play tricks on you.

To learn how to keep your boy friend in line without losing him, send for Ann Landers' new booklet, "Necking and Petting—And How Far to Go," inclosing with your request 20 cents in coin and a large, self-addressed, stamped envelope. Ann Landers will be glad to help you with your problems. Send them to her in care of the Post-Dispatch inclosing a stamped self-addressed envelope.

Money Means Work

HELPING A YOUNGSTER to learn that there is a very close connection between money and work takes quite a bit of doing.

Ten-year-old Owen has had an ample allowance since he was 6. He also has had a goodly number of chores to do so that he would learn to take responsibility and to feel that work must be done for money provided. For the most part he has done the chores with no more than the usual grumbling.

One day, however, one of his jobs, lawn mowing, looked so distasteful that he decided to hire it done. The understanding has always been that he may spend his money as he wishes so long as the expenditures are reasonable. Mother, however, did not look on this one as reasonable because the responsibility was his. When Dad came home he agreed.

Owen put up quite an argument. He said he was taking the responsibility when he was willing to pay for having the work done. Why, he asked, should he do it when he didn't want to and had the money to hire it done? Dad pointed out that he had had to work to earn the money in the first place. It was only right, he said, that Owen should work in return for having it given to him. Owen mowed the lawn still arguing.

As the father told about it later he said, "I began to realize that the kid was not getting the connection between money and work. The money and the work were too far apart. I guess he's got to do the work then get the money in his hand."

Many parents have tried the allowance-for-chores plan to help their youngster get the idea that money must be earned. Many have found—just as Owen's father did—that the youngsters do not get the connection. It is easy to see why.

Besides not being tied together in point of time, the chores are something the child would have to do anyway. The amount of the allowance usually does not really pay for the work done. If the child does not do the chores it is not likely that he will be wholly deprived of money, even though the amount is cut down. Certainly his necessities are still taken care of.

It is only as the youngster has one experience after another with actually earning that the connection between money and work is likely to become clear. A child is fortunate when Mother and Dad keep steadily at it to help him see it.

Gold Mine in the Sky for Astronomers Now

Dr. I. M. Levitt, Happy Space Man-Columnist, Tells of Big Pay in Celestial Mechanics

By Jack Rice

GO UP, YOUNG MAN.

There's gold in them thar nose cones. Dr. I. M. Levitt, one of the happiest space men on earth, passed through town recently and commented on the opportunities for students in celestial mechanics and astronomy. The salaries he mentioned were what they should be. Astronomical.

"I have offers on my desk at home in Philadelphia," Dr. Levitt said, "from aircraft companies seeking astronauts. One offer has a starting salary of $16,000 and the other has a starting salary of $18,000, both with fringe benefits. Think of that, $18,000 with fringes on it."

Dr. Levitt sat up straight as a slide rule, beaming at the lovely thoughts he was spreading around. He hasn't any use for the jobs personally though. He has all the enjoyment he can handle, directing the planetarium of the Franklin Institute in Philadelphia and writing a column about space travel. The column is sighted from time to time in the Post-Dispatch.

"I'm having a wonderful time doing what I'm doing now, working at the institute, lecturing and traveling, and writing the column once a week," he said. "The column is in 87 newspapers and it's estimated to have 80,000,000 readers. I'm translated into nine languages but the only thing I can read in the foreign papers is my by-line. They spell it right."

Astronomy is the science of studying stars and planets, before all the satellites block them from view. Astronomers are a hurried lot. Celestial mechanics sounded far out, however. What is it? Have tool box, will rock?

Dr. Levitt shook his head. Celestial mechanics is earth-bound. Of course, there is no telling when they will take off but right now a celestial mechanic on a typical working day will compute the path of a satellite, determine the route to take to hit the moon, miss it or make a U-turn.

"When a celestial mechanic problem concerns the position of bodies subject to the gravitational pulls of the sun, the earth and the moon, that's when you have real trouble," said Dr. Levitt.

"For instance, it's much more difficult to put a satellite in orbit around the earth than around the sun. You need speed and direction to get it going around the earth. You only need speed, seven miles a second, to get it around the sun.

DR. I. M. LEVITT

—By a Post-Dispatch Photographer.

"The demand for scientists to work on these problems is great. Far as I know, the only universities in this country offering celestial mechanics are Princeton, Harvard, Yale, the University of Chicago, the University of California, Michigan, Ohio State and Cal Tech. It's a caste-ridden field, too. The Ph.D.'s won't talk to the master's-degree men and the masters won't talk to the bachelor-degree men."

Dr. Levitt has a Ph.D. degree in astronomy from the University of Pennsylvania. Keeps him from being lonely at any level in the business.

After he was graduated from Drexel Institute in Philadelphia as a bachelor of science in mechanical engineering, he joined an eclipse expedition. The expedition didn't go far, just into New England, and it didn't pay much. He offered his services in return for transportation. For a 1932 college graduate that was a real big fringe benefit. The trip also settled his astronomical hash for good. He was hooked to the stars.

He took a job at the Franklin Institute when it opened in 1933. The arrangement was to take care of the running of the place, at $1.50 an hour. The hours started running long and he was put on straight salary, $1800 a year. Astronomical pay has come a long way since the depression.

The space-for-aymen column started seven years ago and sold well at first, then tapered off. The Russians saved him as a writer.

"After the original blush," Dr. Levitt said, "the bloom wore off the column and papers were dropping it. Got down pretty low for a while and then Sputnik came along. Boom! The column started rolling again and for a while there were six or seven others doing similar columns. Mine's the only one that's survived, outside of Willie Ley's. The

Here's What's in a Name if It's Irish

By Hal (King of the Bog) Boyle

NEW YORK, March 17 (AP). TWENTY MILLION Americans of Irish descent today will honor St. Patrick, patron saint of their ancestral homeland.

They are very proud — on this day even tearfully proud — of their Irish past although they often know little about it except for one thing: They are sure that, like all Irishmen, they sprang from kings.

But their history is written in their names.

Hubbard Keavy, a Los Angeles newsman, literary scholar and noted amateur chef, has made a hobby of studying Irish names. Many, he found, reflect Ireland's many foreign would-be conquerors. They are of Norman, Nordic, Welsh, Scottish—yes, even English origin. Here are the meanings of some well-known Irish names:

Bacon—The live pig. Of English — the saints save us — origin.

Ballard—Bald-headed.

Barker—One who stripped trees of bark for the tanner.

Baron—A real baron, or one who put on the airs of a baron.

Bell—From "le bel" meaning beautiful. Originally Norman.

Bowler—The maker of wooden bowls.

HAL BOYLE

Boyle—From bog hill, the highest part of the bog (naturally!).

Burke—Of the burg, or borough.

Calhoun—Battle-joyful.

Casey—Vigilant, watchful.

Collier—The charcoal burner.

Connelly—Faithful to pledges.

Cooper—Maker of barrels.

Cosgrove—Son of the public crier.

Crosby—Son of the rhymist.

PROPOSAL: In 1925, while on tour, violinist Mischa Elman came to the realization that the only girl for him was Miss Helen Katten of San Francisco, the present Mrs. Elman. Busy with his concert engagements, he sent his proposal by wire.

The future Mrs. Elman was visiting with friends when the message was delivered. It was accepted by her mother, who opened it and promptly phoned her daughter.

"Darling," cried Mrs. Katten, "I have the most wonderful news. You're engaged."

QUESTION: Quite often I see the spelling "inclose" or "inclosed" in business correspondence. I was always taught to spell this word "enclose." Has there been a change in this spelling? Is the old form no longer correct?—C. C. F., San Diego, Calif.

ANSWER: Both spellings are correct. The "enclose" form is still more commonly met and is the preferred form in official United States Government publications, as indicated by the style manual of the United States Government Printing Office. However, you may use whichever spelling appeals to you.

QUESTION: An actor in a TV show recently spoke of one of the murders as a "hee-ne-us crime." What did he mean?—L. C., Pittsburgh.

ANSWER: That murder wasn't the only dastardly deed performed on that show. Chalk up at least a near-murder of the Queen's English for any actor who would pronounce "heinous" as hee-ne-us. The correct pronunciation of this word, which means hateful or wicked, is HAY-nus.

WOMEN
St. Louis Girl Queen Of Winter Carnival

By Margaret Allen Ruhl

MISS NANCY NORTH, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. John R. North, 38 Woodliffe drive, Ladue, was queen of the Winter Carnival this year at Centenary College, Hackettstown, N. J., where she is a freshman.

A traditional celebration, the carnival recurred Thursday, with the first heavy snow of the year. As usual classes were recessed and the students, grouped by dormitories, competed in creating snow figures and later in games and races. Members of the faculty cheered from the sidelines.

Miss North was crowned at dinner Thursday night by Edward W. Seay, president of Centenary, at whose table she was a guest. Dr. Seay also awarded prizes to winners in the sports competition.

The new queen wore her ski clothes—a bright blue parka, black ski pants and sweater and an ivy league shirt. During the spring holidays Miss North will join a college group in Bermuda.

THE JUNIOR LEAGUE has inaugurated a new series of bridge luncheons, the first of which took place yesterday at the league clubrooms. The series will continue each Monday through April 6. Luncheon served at noon is immediately followed by the bridge lessons taught by Mrs. Raymond McNally. Each lesson is a complete unit. Tea-room members, league members and their guests may attend. Mrs. John G. Stevenson is chairman for the series.

Miss Berryman Plans May Wedding.

MISS VIRGINIA FERGUSON BERRYMAN and Charles Havard Perkins, whose engagement was announced in January, will be married Saturday night, May 30, at First Presbyterian Church in University City. Two ministers, the Rev. Dr. M. Denton Gerow and the Rev. Dr. R. Calvin Dobson, will officiate at the 8:30 o'clock ceremony which is to be followed by a reception at the Gatesworth Hotel.

Martha Carr's

OPINION

Sarcasm in the Office

Dear Martha: A FRIEND AND I would like your views and those of your readers. We are employed at the same office and my friend has become embroiled in a half-kidding, half-serious fight with one of the men in authority.

Readers are requested to keep their letters short when writing to Martha Carr. For a personal reply include a self-addressed stamped envelope with the letter you send to Martha Carr, in care of the Post-Dispatch. Letters of a medical or legal nature cannot be answered.

He is not her direct superior but holds a high position. They have occasion to speak to each other several times each day. She has answered back when she thinks he is being sarcastic and they are at odds most of the time.

In my opinion, he continues to be sarcastic because she does snap back. I was brought up to believe that anyone in his position should be treated with respect. He may have been kidding at first but now goes out of his way to show her who is top man. She feels he really is small and mean and that anyone who does not answer sarcasm with sarcasm has no backbone and lets people walk over him.

WHO IS RIGHT?

Anyone who is sarcastic to a superior is not only asking for like treatment—but also for her walking papers. There are too many co-operative and pleasant people around for firms to waste time on those with bad tempers. The surest way to receive respect from others is to show them respect, and the best way to keep from being walked on by others is to make sure you never step on them.

Dear Martha: MY HUSBAND AND I have been married two years. All the time he gets letters from his girl friend in California and he meets her when she comes to town. Someone told me about the letters and I have caught him meeting her. How can I find out where he gets the mail from as I would put a quick end to it all?

IN DOUBT.

What difference does the postmark make? It's the address that counts. Tell him that playing post office is a baby game and it's time for him to grow up and remember he's a married man.

Dear Martha: I WOULD LIKE TO TELL the girl whose fiancé and family expect a big show on her wedding day to dry her tears and be satisfied with the one her parents can afford. My daughter was married in a suit at mass, had a small breakfast because we could not do better. I believe she is happier today than her cousins who had big weddings even though their parents were not much better off financially than we were. Today she has a prettier home than they. So cheer up, little girl, and let your mom and dad buy something for your home to show for many years to come and not for a one-day show.

E.R.

Are you planning a shower for a bride or for a mother-to-be? Martha Carr's free shower leaflets will help you plan invitations, games, refreshments. Be sure to include a stamped, self-addressed envelope with your request.

Eleanor Roosevelt

A Young African Doctor

SHIRAZ, Iran, March 17.

JUST BEFORE I LEFT on this trip I had a most interesting visitor back in New York—a young African from Kenya who is a medical doctor.

This young man, Munjai Njoroge, was born in Kenya in 1926. After obtaining his early education in Kenya, he earned his bachelor of science degree in hygiene at the University of South Africa in Pretoria in the Union of South Africa.

Somewhat he became the pen pal of a New York schoolboy and was encouraged to believe that if he came to America he would be able to get the more advanced education that he wanted. He had to survive various financial crises, but finally reached New York by way of London with three cents in his pocket. He borrowed his fare to California and enrolled at Stanford University, from which in due time he received his B.S. and M.D. degrees there.

He then held an internship at Kings County Hospital, New York, and later received an appointment at Presbyterian Hospital, also in New York.

Now he is planning to return to Africa as Kenya's first American-trained physician. He hopes to establish there the first modern hospital for Africans, administered by Africans, in a rural area, and he is being helped in this enterprise by the Medical International Co-operation Division of the International Rescue Committee.

I feel sure that this group is co-operating in its work with the World Health Organization so that the maximum good can come out of this enterprise.

Kenya is a British crown colony and protectorate which is working toward its independence. It is about one and a half times the size of California. It has a population of a little over 6,000,000 people, who are mainly engaged in agriculture.

What hospitals now exist in Kenya are in towns, so in the rural areas only a few Government and missionary clinics serve the people. Most of the doctors are Europeans or Asians. They have done remarkable work, but few speak the language or understand the background of the people they serve. There is now only one other African private doctor in Kenya, so Dr. Njoroge on his return will be the second African doctor and the first trained in the United States.

This is an exciting project, and help will be needed to see it materialize. But I am sure there will be interest on a broad scale in this young man who had the determination and courage to travel more than halfway around the world for his education.

This is a great opportunity for the American people to show their interest in helping an area of the world where the Soviets are very ready to give "technical assistance" in order to prove that they understand the needs better than we do.

Emily Post

Social Problems

DEAR MRS. POST: When a bride is wearing ordinary day clothes and not a wedding dress and veil, is it in good taste for her to have a procession up through the church and out again?

Answer: If the church is very small, the wedding group would properly walk up the aisle. But if the church is very large and its emptiness therefore very conspicuous, it would be better certainly to enter from the chance. The bride would enter on the arm of her father or whoever is to give her away. If there are no more than very few persons present, she and the bridegroom might possibly walk in together.

Van Cliburn's Sore Finger

A finger operation at last has ended Van Cliburn's, the young American who took Moscow by storm last year, from his beloved keyboard. Chafing at his enforced rest, a major regret is postponement of his second tour of the Soviet Union where he won fame.

By Edward L. Smith

NEW YORK, March 17 (AP).

FOR THE FIRST TIME since he was 3 years old, Van Cliburn's piano is silent.

The blond, bushy-haired 24-year-old Texan is under doctors' orders to stay away from a keyboard for two months, while the middle finger of his right hand heals from an operation. Then he will be allowed to practice only lightly for another month.

The idea of a complete rest is distasteful to Cliburn. He has practiced daily for 21 years, four hours a day before concerts. Now, after the operation on an abscessed fingertip, he is restless to resume his heavy schedule.

"The fact that I can't play is more injurious to my morale than the pain I sustained," the pianist, clad in pale blue pajamas and a blue plaid robe, remarked at the Hospital for Special Surgery.

His physician reported the operation a success, saying Cliburn would be able to play again normally.

Despite his weakness, Cliburn has kept busy in his private eighth-floor room, from which he can look northward at barges moving slowly along the East River.

Now he has a chance to watch television—"Something I never had much time for before," he reported.

"I've done a little reading, too," he reported. "Poetry, for the moment—poetry more than prose." A favorite is Lord Byron.

Van Cliburn also manages to keep up with the musical world. On his bed lay an orchestration of Samuel Barber's "Capricorn Concerto," and he had just finished playing a Metropolitan Opera recording of Barber's opera "Vanessa." Among the books piled on his table was "Olin Downes on Music."

VAN CLIBURN

His mother, Mrs. Harvey Levan Cliburn Sr., his first piano teacher, attended two concerts he gave here with the Philharmonic-Symphony Orchestra on the weekend before he went to the hospital. But she had to return home to Kilgore, Tex., where his father is an oil company executive, before the operation.

"Mother is busy from dawn to midnight," he explained, "and she had to get back—her piano students were putting on a Bach festival."

An abscessed finger is more serious than it may sound, and Cliburn's physician has ordered him to rest in the sun when he is released from the hospital, on a date not yet determined.

"Every concert is only postponed," he replied, smiling, to a question about cancellations. "I don't believe in cancellations."

tions. Never close the door, you know . . .

"I have received several invitations to play with my good hand—some pieces like Ravel's 'Left Hand Concerto.' But the doctor thinks I should rest."

One major regret was postponing a concert trip scheduled in Russia next month—the country where he became famous by winning the Tchaikovsky piano contest last April.

The tall, young American, poised and friendly, was enthusiastically received by the Russians, and was given a bear-hug by Premier Nikita Khrushchev after he won the gold medal at the contest.

Cliburn thinks his finger became infected while he was clipping his nails—a necessary chore for pianists—and he apparently cut one nail at an odd angle.

"I've had lots of sore fingers before, and played in spite of them," he remarked. "In fact, one finger was split down the side the night I won the competition in Moscow. But this one was so bad I could hardly play."

The five physicians who worked on his half-hour operation Feb. 27 had one unusual difficulty, due to his constant piano-playing—cutting through a callus one-eighth inch thick on his finger.

"I'm going to have a terribly tender hand," Cliburn predicted. "Not just from inactivity, but because I have to soak it every day."

In such a finger operation, he was told, the surgeon ordinarily removes the entire nail. But because Cliburn must use his fingers so much, the doctors removed only one-third of the nail, to minimize chances that he might lose it.

Now Cliburn's major concern is waiting to see if the nail will grow back. He has the fingers of his other hand crossed on that.

Pirate Adventures
By Ramon Coffman

WHILE NEAR the Cape Verde Islands, the pirates on the Revenge captured another vessel. They burned their own craft, and gave the prize a new name, calling it the Bachelor's Delight.

William Dampier was ordered to serve as pilot on the Bachelor's Delight, and steered it around Cape Horn, then northward in the Pacific ocean. At length the lonely island of Juan Fernandez (JOO-ahn fur NAY-deez) was reached. That island was used for a time as headquarters for the pirates, who made raids on the Spanish mainland, including western Mexico.

SICKENED by the actions of the pirates, Dampier managed to gain a place on another vessel, the Signet, commanded by a captain named Swan. This captain has been described as a "half pirate," but his principles were better than those of the commander on the Bachelor's Delight.

The Signet sailed across the Pacific, toward islands off the coast of Asia. Food became short, and Capt. Swan was glad when he reached the Ladrone.

DAMPIER parted company with Swan soon afterward, and spent much time visiting the Philippines and other islands. At length, at the age of 39, he finished his first trip around the world and wrote a book about his adventures.

The British government put Dampier in charge of an old man-of-war, and sent him to explore various Pacific islands, including New Guinea.
